ABOUT THE BOOK

The subject of "Rasa" (Divine Sentiments) was never presented so analytically and systematically as now !!!

'Rasa' is what constitutes the pastimes of Lord Krishna with His Supreme Consort Sri Radha. So, this book is simply a MUST for all those who -

- Want to delve deep into Lord Krishna's Divine Pastimes.
- Long to know the secret 'sadhana' of Gaudiya Vaisnavism.
- O Want to know how to relish Divine Literature.
- Are interested in philosophy.

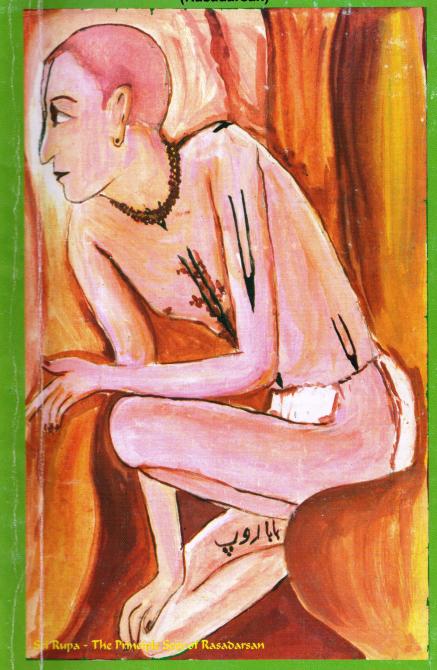

ABOUT THE COVER

The picture on the cover is that of Sri Rupa, who was a follower of Sri Caitanya Mahaprabhu. He was a topmost rasika devotee and the King of all poets.

Here he is seen in a humble posture in conversation with Emperor Akbar. He was captured in this mood about 500 years ago by the Emperor's artist. On his inner right thigh we see 'Baba Rupa' scrawled in Persian. Since time had taken its toll on the picture, it required a brief retouch. The original is mostly carefully stored in Sri Radhakund.

Meaning – "All glory to Śri Rupa. Sanāṭana, Raghunāṭha Bhatta, Jiva, Gopāla Bhatta and Raghunāṭha Dāsa! I pay my obeisance unto their lotus feet that have the power to alleviate all obstacles and to fulfil all Spiritual desires."

Offering 1

From his vast garden of Rasa, I had plucked a few fragrant flowers. The immense fragrance of the flowers had tempted me to knit them into a garland. No doubt, the flowers are fragrant, but there is no creativity in the garland. So I dare not gift it to anyone. I have decided to present it to the one from whose garden I have plucked these flowers, because, whenever I have offered anything, he has always accepted it smilingly and affectionately. Hence, like worshiping Mother Ganga with her own waters, I am offering this garland of "RASADARSAN" with utmost devotion to my most venerable, expert -in-all-the-scriptures, 'Nityalilā pravista Śrimat DINAŚARAN DĀS Bābāji Mahārāj'.

- Pretending to be a servant,
Ananta das.

All Glory to Śri Śri Goursundar

PREFACE

The Rasa-stuff is beyond all material nature and is inconceivable like the Brahman who is transcendental. It can only be experienced and cannot be ascertained by arguments. Those who do not have the desire or culture to relish Rasa, can never realize Rasa in their hearts.

"Tasmadalaukikah satyam vedyah sahrdayairayam."

-Sahitya Darpan

Meaning - "Rasa is out-of-this world and known only to a connoisseur."

The ultimate goal of the living entity is to obtain 'bliss'. The Vedas, Purāṇas, various religions and philosophies have shown the ways and means to achieve this. In the same way, the Rasa-scientists have pointed towards Rasa as a means to attain the zenith of bliss.

"Rasasyānanda dharmātvāt" and "Camatkari sukham Rasah." -Alaṃkāra Kausṭubha

Meaning – "Bliss is an inseparable property of Rasa" and "Rasa has a wonderful joy"

The Supreme Personality of Godhead is full of Rasa or bliss. The living entity can be really blissful by relishing Him alone.

"Raso vai sah" , "Ānanḍam Brahman" and "Rasa hyevāyam labdlīānanḍi bhavaṭi." Śruti

Meaning – "He alone is Rasa", "Brahman is bliss" and "One can attain bliss by relishing Rasa."

Hence the devotees are worshipers of Rasa-Brahman (the Supreme Personality who is filled with Rasa). The one who desires to relish literature should seek out the *Rasa-*filled Lord Govinda through good literature and thus worship Rasa-Brahman. For him, good literature is the best guide and also the best way to attain Rasa-Brahman. The rhetoricians say –

"Svādah kāvyārtha sambhedātmānanda samudbhāvah, Rasa ityucyate."

Meaning – "When the descriptions in a literary piece illuminates the heart and the soul is floated with bliss, the expression of that relish is called 'Rasa'."

"Vibhāvenānubhāvena vyākţah sancariņa ţaţhā, Rasaţāmeţi raţyādi sthāyibhāvah saceţāṣām."

Sāhitya Darpan

Meaning – "A Rasa (e.g. erotic Rasa) is expressed through its dominant mood (i.e. passion), the subjects, their activities and passing moods. Only when this Rasa becomes relishing to an appreciating connoisseur, it can be termed as 'Rasa'.

According to the rhetoricians, devotion is only a $bh\bar{a}va$ and cannot be classified as 'Rasa'. They say that – the passion for the demigods is a part of bhava.

"Bhava evabhiśampannah prayanti Rasa rupaṭam."

Meaning - "When bhava attains maturity it is called 'Rasa'.

According to rhetoricians, the bhava regarding demi-gods can never attain so much maturity as to be classified as 'Rasa'. This logic may be true in the case of demi-gods, but does not apply to transcendental devotion of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The Bhaktirasa-scientists feel that devotion has got three qualifications viz., form, associates and pastimes. Hence devotion alone can be classified as 'Rasa'. They are not ready to term the Rasa of worldly literature as 'true Rasa' since these literature contain the three modes of material nature. However, they have established the transcendental Divine Rasa with the help of worldly literature alone. It is also necessary for us to have excellent knowledge of worldly literature if we wish to understand and relish Divine Rasa-literature. In this book there is a detailed description of how Bhakti is transformed into Rasa. Many principles of literature have been incorporated in this book to make the reading more enjoyable.

Sometimes Śrīmat Dīnaśaran dāsa Bābāji Mahārāj who was sheltered at Vṛndāban, used to visit Śri Rādhākund. He was an expert in all the scriptures. Whenever possible, I used to visit him, lured by the greed of hearing Śrī Hari Kaṭhā. He would tell Hari Kaṭhā with a joyous face – as if it was a source of flowing nectar. I was enchanted. In between, he would also tell something about Rasa. I would note it down. Those few words spoken by His Holiness Bābāji Maḥārāj are the original ingredients of this 'RASADARŚAN'. Even in my dreams I had never thought that those topics of Rasa-science would be published in the form of a text someday, that too so nicely decorated with examples.

My most Worshiped Spiritual Master Śrimat Kunjabihari das Babaji Maharaj had ordered this fallen servant to write a text about Rasa. That order is the root cause of the wish to write this book. As long as Guru Maharaj was there on this earth, that wish had only remained in the form of a seed in my heart. It was unable to germinate because the water of mercy was not available.

Now that both the Babaji Maharaj have suddenly showered the rain of mercy on my heart, the seed has germinated and blossomed into a beautiful tree decorated with leaves and flowers.

'Rasaḍarśan' is a fruit of this very same tree. I do not know whether this fruit is sweet or tasteless. Anyway, I am offering it to the good devotees. A request at their lotus-feet – please taste it at least once. If you relish it, know it to be the fruit of the mercy of both the Bābāji Mahārāj.

If you find it tasteless, then it is due to the ignorance of this servant. Please do rectify the mistake and knowing it to be a mischief of an ignorant child, please forgive the same.

Begging the mercy of Guru and Vaisnavas, in all humility,

Ananța das.

All Glory to Sri Sri Guru and Gouranga

A few words from the translator :-

We would like to express our heartfelt gratitude towards our most beloved Godbrother Sri Anup Kumar Bannerjee who was the main inspiration behind this translation. He had toiled endlessly to make the English version of Rasadarsan see the daylight. He had held the tiny hand of this very immature translator on her amateurish venture and given her the much-required support of a mature and wise devotee. He has helped at every step, right from the disentangling of very complex Bengali sentences to discerning the meaning of Sanskrit verses and Vaisnava terms, as well as making endless trips to the printers' offices. It is most unfortunate that he left us all so suddenly to enter the Divine Pastimes just before the release of this book. 'The Philosophy of Divine Sentiments' was actually his dream-child since he badly wanted that literature pertaining to pure devotion must reach the Western readers. We know for sure that he has entered the Rasa-filled world of the Divine Couple. We pray to you, dear God brother, to help us serve Sri Guru Maharaj more sincerely than ever.

We would also like to thank Sri Pradeep Gupta, Nirjhar, Bonani and Madhabi kakima for the massive computer-sevā which they have extended and the loads of encouragement without which this book would not have been possible.

Last but not the least, we would like to thank all the Godsisters and Godbrothers of Mumbai for always expressing a sweet mood of seva that is so becoming of exalted Vaiṣṇavas like them.

Here is a big THANK YOU to all of you!!

- Begging the mercy of Śri Guru and Vaiṣṇavas, and pretending to be humble, the translator.

"Raðā śaure Gaure vapusi parama prema rasāðe saðeka prāṇe niṣkapata bhāvosmi bhāviṭa, kaðā vā ṭasya alaukika saðānumanena mama hṛðyakasmāṭ Śri rāðhāpaða nakhamaṇi jyoṭiruðgāṭ?"

"O Merciful Kṛṣṇa! You have appeared as a fountainhead of Rasa in the form of Lord Goursungar.

O Lord Caitanya! When will you shower mercy on those who love you so much?

O Lord Gouranga! When will I offer causeless devotional service to You, knowing You as transcendental?

Will my heart be suddenly dazzled with the splendor of Rāḍhārāni's toenail during meditation?"

- (Caitanya Candrāmṛṭa)

"Yaðāmita rasašastre vyañji vaiðagðhya vrnðam taðānu mapi na vettyut kalpate kāmilokāh, taðākhilamapi yasya premasindhau na kiñcit mithunāmajita goparupametaðvibhāvati."

Meaning — "Materialistic, lusty men are unable to know even an iota of the Rasas described in innumerable books of Rasa. But even if the entire skill of such literature is entirely expressed, it would appear insignificant in the ocean of the love of the Divine Couple, that is, Sri Kṛṣṇa and Radhārāṇi".

The Philosophy of Divine Sentiments

Rasadarsán or The Philosophy of Divine Sentiments (Mellows or Rasa) is the seventh school of philosophy. If we want to discuss about Rasa, we should, first of all take shelter of Rasa-scientists. In the science of Rasa, such remarkable truths have been propounded that these Rasa-scientists can be called seers of Rasa – as if they are actually visualizing Rasa.

However we know of only six schools of philosophy. One does not find the Philosophy of Rasa being mentioned as a separate school. Before the advent of Gaudiya Vaiṣṇava ūcāryas (teachers) the subject of Rasa had not attained so much maturity. Hemāḍri who existed in the twelfth or thirteenth century has established logically the existence of Divine Mellows. He has written in his purport to 'Mukṭāphala' by Vyopadeva –

"Aṭah sarvaṭhā nisṭūṣaṃ Bhakṭi Rasaḍarśanām "

Meaning – "Hence the philosophy of Divine mellows is always pure."

Most probably Hemadri was the first one to mention the word 'Rasadarsan'.

'Rasa' means something that can be relished. But this does not mean that anything and everything that can be relished is 'Rasa'. Rasa indicates relish coupled with a sense of wonder. Kavi Karnapura has written –

"Rase sārāśćamaṭkāro yam binā na raso Rasah"

Meaning - "If there is no sense of wonder in relish, it is not Rasa."

A sense of wonder is the soul of Rasa. What do we mean by wonder? Amongst all the things we see or hear, if something is so beautiful that we have never seen nor heard before, then by seeing or hearing it, our mind is thrilled and unknown to us, our eyes bulge out. This thrill is called 'wonder.' The thrill in the heart is expressed through eyes. This indescribable wonderful relish is called Rasa. Srila Karṇapūra has defined Rasa in Alaṃkāra Kausṭubha in this way –

"vahiranṭahkaraṇayor vyāpāranṭara roḍhakaṃ, svakāraṇāḍi saṃsleśi camaṭkāri sukhaṃ Rasah."

Meaning – "If the proper elements come together to cause a joyous wonderment in the heart due to which all internal and external senses come to a standstill, then that joy-filled wonder is called 'Rasa'.

Rupa Goswami has said -

"vyaţitya bhavanavarţma yaścamatkarabharabhuh, hṛḍi saṭṭvojwale vādham svadate sa raso maṭāh."

-(B.R.S.2.5.132)

Meaning - "Rasa is the indescribable wonderful relish that is beyond the power of human thinking and arises in the pure heart brightened by goodness."

TWO TYPES OF RASA-SCIENCE - MATERIAL AND TRANSCENDENTAL

Rasa-science is of two types – material and transcendental (Divine). Dr. S. K. De has written about material Rasa-science in his 'History of Sanskrit Poetics' – "It is a half-theoretical and half-practical discipline." That is his opinion

The mundane heroes and heroines of this world cannot relish Rasa fully. This is because their relish is material, limited and full of obstacles. Actual Rasa is devoid of these three qualities.

Majority of the teachers feels that although Rasa is like experiencing Brahman (God) and beyond mind and speech, a fortunate audience can relish Rasa. The material Rasa-scientists are divided in their opinions. There are four theories –

- (1) The original hero of any incident is the main relisher of Rasa while the actor imitating him is secondary.
- (2) The original hero cannot relish Rasa much because of human incapability, limitations and obstacles. Hence it is the actor who relishes Rasa.
- (3) Neither the original hero nor the actor actually relishes Rasa. The actor is, after all, only imitating the activities of the original hero, since he is trained to do so. Hence the real relisher of Rasa is the audience.
- (4) If the actor has a pure heart, he as well as the audience will relish Rasa.

However the transcendental Rasa-scientists say that everybody – the hero, actor, as well as the audience – relish Rasa, since all of them are devoid of obstacles and Divine love is extraordinary and unlimited. It is not ridden with the fallacies of mundane literature. It cannot be limited by fear, birth and death and not even by the bliss of experiencing Brahman. Prahlāḍa, Jadabharat, Śukaḍeva all prove this point. According to the transcendental scientists of Divine Rasa –

"Rasasya sva prakāsatvam akhandātvañća siḍhyaṭi"

-(B. R. S. 2. 5. 112)

Meaning - "It is self-expressed, continuous, conscious and blissful."

Hence they feel that even the greatest of all worldly pleasures cannot be classified under 'Rasa'. All those who have been tortunate enough to experience transcendental, Divine, conscious, blissful Rasa, agree with the above conclusion.

Rasa is conscious, blissful, unworldly, unlimited and without any obstacle. These qualities of Rasa make one feel that it is possible to experience true Rasa only in relation to the Supreme Personality of Godhead ($Bhagav\bar{a}n$) because He is the embodiment of Rasa.

Śruṭi says - " raso vai sah " and "ānanḍam Brahman".

Meaning - "He is the fountainhead of Rasa" and "God is Bliss" respectively.

Brahman has been discussed in Brahmasutra or Vedantadarsan. Hence you may say that, Brahmasutra or Vedanta itself is Rasadarsan. What is the need for a seventh school of philosophy? There is a well-known proverb in the Brahmo Samaj of Bengal—"Know Brahman, meditate on Brahman, drink the nectar of Brahman". The commentators of Brahmasutra have not discussed Rasa arising out of the activities of heroes and heroines. Rather they have considered such activities to be a deterrent of Rasa.

The material Rasa-scientists feel that very few people can relish Rasa by studying Vedanta. However, all those who are interested in literature and poetry are naturally thirsty for Rasa. They want to relish Rasa but are unqualified to discuss Vedanta. So a special arrangement has to be made for them.

Now, we cannot overlook the fact that although the Rasa of Biterature is not equal to the Rasa of Brahman, it is indeed next to Brahma-Rasa and is even helpful in relishing Brahma-Rasa.

Although the greatest literatures of the world are not equal to Brahma-Rasa, but they can at least be compared to the same. Hence it has been said that the Rasa of literature is "Brahmasvāḍa sahoḍarah" which means that it is akin to Brahma-Rasa. This is the opinion of the author of Sāhiṭya Darpan (Mirror of Literature). He has clearly stated that Rasa is the very soul of literature.

"vakyam Rasātmakam kāvyam...... Rasa eva atma sara rūpaṭayā jīvanādhayāko yasya ṭena vinā ṭasya kāvyātvanāng ikāraṭ " -Sāhiṭya Darpaṇ Meaning – "A Rasa-filled sentence is poetry. Poetry is that whose life and essence is Rasa. Without Rasa a sentence cannot be classified as poetry." There are more connoisseurs of literature than there are of Vedanta.

According to the transcendental Rasa-scientists, the aim of material poetry is only to entertain the human mind – hence it is full of illusion. Naturally it is temporary and limited. Hence it cannot give you full pleasure. Jīva Gosvāmi clearly states in Prīti Sandarbha –

" kiñca laukikasya ratyādeh sukharupaṭvaṃ yaṭhā kathañcideva, vasṭu vicāre duhkha paryavasayiṭvaṭ, Ṭasmāṭ laukikasya vibhāvādeh Rasajanakāṭvam."

- (110th chapter)

Meaning – "The pleasure of worldly passion is very less. Worldly passion results ultimately in sorrow. Hence it should not be respected as a source of Rasa".

Abhinava Guptāćarya says -

"sakala pramāna pariniścita dṛṣtadṛṣta viṣaya viśeṣajaṃ yaṭ sukhaṃ yaḍāpi va lokaṭṭaraṃ Rasacaroakaṭmakam ṭaṭa ubhayaṭopi parameśvara viśrānṭānandah prakṛṣyate."

Meaning - " It has been proved that the bliss arising from taking shelter of the Supreme Personality is much more exquisite than that arising either from being desire-free or the happiness of chewing worldly Rasa. All those who have been fortunate of relishing the bliss of Divine Rasa, consider worldly *Rasa*s to be limited and insignificant. Jiva Gosvami has stated –

" yadamita Rasasastre vyañji vaidagdhyavrndam tadanumapi na vettum kalpate kamilokah, tadakhilam api yasya premasindhau na kincit mithunamajita gopa rupam etad bhavati."

Meaning – "Materialistic, lusty men are unable to know even an iota of the Rasas described in innumerable books of Rasa. But even if the entire skill of such literature is entirely expressed, it would appear insignificant in the ocean of the love of the Divine Couple, that is, Sri Kṛṣṇa and Raḍharaṇi. Here, 'yadamiṭa Rasa sastṛe' most probably refers to worldly Rasa-literature.

RASA OF WORLDLY LITERATURE CANNOT BE RELISHED BY A MIND DISTURBED BY PASSION AND IGNORANCE

Men, whose hearts are filled with dirty lusty desires, cannot experience even a drop of worldly Rasas. It is possible to relish literary Rasa only when the modes of passion and ignorance subside, the mode of goodness appears and the heart is purified. A heart, which is stormed by worldly passions, can never reflect the thoughts of a virtuous poet. You will feel continuous joy while relishing poetry if your mind is not disturbed by other thoughts. When such is the case for worldly literature then it is needless to say that one would feel million times more bliss in relishing Divine Rasa than one would do in experiencing Brahmananda (Merging with Brahman).

Now we can understand that there is a realm of Rasa in material as well as spiritual literature that is outside Vedanṭaḍarśan. Hence the need for a seventh School of Philosophy called *'Rasa*darśan'.

In this book, little description of this philosophy is being attempted.

Everyone wants happiness. None wants sorrow. All are running after happiness. The ancient rṣis pray –

"sukham me bhuyat, duhkham ma bhut "

Meaning - "Let happiness pervade, let sorrow disappear."

Indian philosophers have put forth various ideas about gaining happiness and bliss. Western philosophers too have various opinions about happiness. According to the Greek philosopher Epicures, bodily pleasures are topmost – "Eat, drink and make merry, for tomorrow we die." His opinion is very much like that of Carvaka who said –

"Yavat jivet sukham jivet, rṇam krtva ghṛṭam pivet" and "bhasmibhūṭasya ḍehasya punaragamanam kuṭah?"

Meaning – " Make merry whilst you live, even if you have to incur debts in order to enjoy luxury" and " all is over once the body turns into dust".

They are selfish and their opinion is called "Hedonism". The latter philosophers have thought about happiness and have concluded that happiness too can be classified and measured. Happiness can be in the mode of passion and ignorance as well. Permanent happiness is more desirable than a spurt of temporary happiness and so is holy happiness more desirable than unholy happiness. John Stuart Mill is famous amongst the western philosophers who propounded this theory. It is called 'Altruism' or 'Otherism'. Our Rantideva belongs to group.

Another group believes in being perfect in all respects. One should not lack anything. Their theory is called 'Perfectionism'. They always have to be satisfied with themselves. Different people desire happiness in different ways – but all are not connoisseurs of poetry. They realize very soon that whatever they are accepting, as happiness, for the time being, is not happiness. Result – NO RASA.

The Rasa relished by a worldly couple does not remain once their youth disappears. Mostly it does not last even throughout the entire youth. And how long does youth last anyway?

"Dvitridinaneva yauvanam idam"

Meaning - "Youth lasts for only two or three days."

How much can one enjoy and make merry? How long does merriment last? Hence worldly Rasa-scientists say that if we want to relish Rasa, we have to study superior literature.

"saṃsāra viṣavrkśayā dve eva Rasavat phale, kāvyamṛṭah Rasāsvāḍah sangamah sujānaih saha."

Meaning – "The poison tree of this world has two nectarine fruits – one is the relish of nectarine literature and the other is the association of good people."

GREAT POETS HAVE EXTRAORDINARY POETIC TALENTS. HENCE RASA FLOWS THROUGH THEIR POETRY.

If someone asks from where has Rasa arrived in superior poetry, the answer is that –

"apāre kavya saṃsāre kavireva prajāpaṭih"

Meaning – "The poetic talent of great poets is unworldly due to which unworldly Rasa flows through their poetry in an_____ unworldly manner."

Kavi Karnapura has drawn the characteristics of a poet in his Alamkara Kaustubha -

"sabijahi kavirgneyah sa sarvagama kovidah, saRasa pratibhaśāli yadi sya duttam astadā."

Meaning – "He who is born with the seed of poetic talent, is adept at all figures of speech, is well-versed in many texts and is full of Rasa, is considered to be a great poet."

From this we understand that a 'poet' is one who is the source of poetry, and is born with an inherent talent for poetry. Hence it is generally said – "Poets are born, not made." What does the word talent mean? It is defined in the following way –

"pragnya navanavonmeśaśālini praţibhā maṭāh , taṭ anupreraṇāṭ jīveṭ varṇanā nipunah kavih."

Meaning – "The intelligence that is capable of creating ever new subjects is called 'talent'."

Talent is the very source of a creative poet's life. Without talent it is impossible to create great poetry. Such poets are able to express their thoughts using few words only thus causing great Rasa for literary connoisseurs. It has been said –

"ekavyava saṃsthena bhūṣaneva kāminī, paḍyaḍyoṭena sukhavardhanena bhāti bhārati".

Meaning - "The beauty of a naturally beautiful damsel is enhanced if she wears even one ornament; similarly a talented poet is able to express himself using a few words."

The feelings expressed in the works of great poets are far more superior, clear, refined and enlightened than the feelings and Rasas of the material world. Just as one gets rid of waste matter from the grains with the help of a sieve, in the same way the works of great poets do not contain any waste matter. Although their work may not be beyond material nature, or topmost, at least they are devoid of the modes of passion and ignorance, and belong to the mode of goodness.

THE IMPORTANCE AND NECESSITY OF THE MODE OF GOODNESS

According to rhetoricians the relish of Rasa arises from Saṭṭvaguṇa (mode of goodness). A mind that is attacked by the modes of passion and ignorance cannot relish Rasa.

"saṭṭvoḍrekāṭ akhaṇḍa svaprakāśa ānanḍa cinmayah, veḍyānṭara sparṣa śunyah Brahmāsvāḍa sahoḍarah, lokoṭṭara camaṭkāra prāṇah kaściṭ pramāṭribhih, svākāra vāḍa bhinnaṭvena yaṇ āsvāḍyaṭe Rasah".

- (Sāhitya Darpaṇa)

Meaning – "Since this Rasa arises from Sattvaguna, it is unlimited, self-illuminant, blissful, conscious and untouched by other subjects and comparable to relishing the Supreme. Some connoisseurs relish the Rasa in these great literary works as if the feelings of the characters are their own. When the reader relishes the Rasa, he feels non-different from the heroes and heroines of the piece. This is why he relishes Rasa."

According to the science of Rasa, a mind that is free from the modes of passion and ignorance is also called 'sattva'. We must remember that if the mind is not free from passion and ignorance we will not be able to relish poetic Rasa. So, to relish poetic Rasa we must acquire Sattvaguṇa.

" kriyatam yadi kuto'pi labhyate"

Meaning - "We would have bought it had it been sold."

HOW TO ACQUIRE SATTVAGUNA

The question may arise – "How can we acquire Sattvaguna?" and one may even reply that if one eats Sattvika food, wears Sattvika clothes, lives in Sattvika place, associates with Sattvika people, his Sattvaguna will be nourished.

"śaucat sattvaśuddhi saumanah ekagra indriya jayatam atmadarśanam yogyatani" - Patanjali

Meaning - "Sattvaguna can be acquired by keeping clean habits."

The Upanisada says -

"ahara śuddhau sattvaśuddhi, sattvaśuddhau dhruvanusmṛtih, smṛtilambhe sarve granthinām vipramoksah."

Meaning – "When we intake food in the mode of goodness, our consciousness is purified. This gives rise to constant remembrance of God which ultimately results in cutting free from all material bondage." In this way the scriptures do mention various ways to acquire Sattvaguna. However the material Rasa-scientists say that-

"tatra ca hețu țadṛśalaukik kavyarțha parisilanam" -(Sahiţya Darpan)

Meaning – "The literary works of great poets are free from the modes of ignorance and passion. Hence by studying them again and again one may acquire <code>Sattvaguṇa</code> and be qualified to relish <code>Rasa</code>".

RASA-DESIRE OR RASA-CULTURE

Although it is true that it is absolutely necessary to have Sattvaguṇa to relish Rasa, it does not mean that anybody and everybody who has Sattvaguṇa will be able to relish Rasa. For this, one more quality is necessary, and that is a Rasa-desire or Rasa-culture.

"na jāyate tadāsvādo binā ratyādivasānam" and " vāsanā ćedanīntani prāktanī ća Rasāsvāda hetuh".

Meaning – "Without the desire for various Rasas such as eros etc.' one cannot relish Rasa. The Rasa-desire is the source of Rasa-relish. This Rasa-desire is of two types – inherent and modern.

RASA-DESIRE - INHERENT AND MODERN

Even the scientists of devotional Rasa agree -

"prākṭanī āḍhunikī casṭi yasya saḍBhakṭi vasanā, eşa Bhakṭi Rasasvaḍah ṭasyaiva ḥṛḍi jayaṭe."

- (B. R. S. 2. 1. 6)

Meaning – "To relish Rasa, both inherent and modern Rasa-desire are needed. If this desire is there from birth, it is called 'inherent'. If it appears in this life itself, then it is called 'modern'. Both types are required to relish Rasa. You may ask – "Is it not enough to have inherent Rasa-desire alone? What is the need for modern Rasa-desire?" To this question we reply that, inherent Rasa-desire alone is not sufficient to relish Rasa. In this lifetime also it is necessary to associate with the connoisseurs of Rasa in order to nourish the inherent Rasa-desire. In this context the author of Sahitya Darpan says –

"Țațra yadi adya no syat, țada śroțriya jaramimansaka adinam api keșanciț Rasadvodho na drsyațe tanna syat."

Meaning – "If inherent Rasa-desire were not necessary, even old ritualists and those with dry knowledge of Vedas would have relished poetry. On the other hand if modern Rasa-desire were not necessary, even a mere child would have relished Rasa just by learning the meaning of a poem."

Now let us discuss what we really mean by 'Rasa-desire'.

"savasanam sabhyanam Rasasya svadanam bhavet, nirvasanastu rangantah kastha kudyasmasannibhah" - (Dharmadatta)

Meaning – "Only those who have Rasa-desire can relish Rasa. The ones who do not have such desire are devoid of any relish of Rasa just like the wooden pillars and stones of the theatre." Hence we see that Rasa-desire or Rasa-culture is the root cause of Rasa-relish.

Ordinarily we do not come across the definition of this desire in poetics. The famous Vedantin and Spiritual Master Śripad Madhusudan Āćarya has written in his 'BhakṭiRasayan' –

"druțe ćițte viniksipțah svakāro yastu vastunāh, saṃskāra-vāsanāviblīāva-bliāvanā sabda bhāgasau".

Meaning – "When the shape of a visible object is reflected in a molten heart, it is called culture, desire, mood or feeling."

The heart is a naturally hard object like Lac. When it comes in contact with a certain subject it melts like Lac does when it comes in contact with fire. The mark of a seal on soft Lac becomes permanent once the Lac hardens. In the same way, the mark of a certain subject on the molten heart is called 'culture' or 'desire'.

In the science of reasoning, knowledge is called temporary. Logicians say, just as a fragrant object leaves behind its fragrance even after being thrown away, knowledge leaves a mark on the soul and then gets destroyed. This mark is called culture or desire. This argument is incorrect since desire is a property of the heart and not of the soul.

Then again, when on coming in contact with the object of desire the heart does not melt totally, but only softens, the object cannot leave a complete mark. Such a desire is called desire-like or culture-like.

The course was the party colors to the colors to the colors to the colors to the color to the co

If we associate with those who have Rasa-desire in their hearts, we too will become comparatively more pure and our hearts too will melt. At that time an impression of his feelings will be made on our mind. In this way it is possible to create Rasa-desire in a person devoid of any Rasa-culture. Desire is of many types, but here we shall discuss Rasa-desire only.

THE RELISHER OF POETRY - (1) POET AND (2) CONNOISSEUR

We have already stated that the literary rasikas very many outnumber the vedānta-rasikas. But in reality, their number is not too many. Their number is very few compared to those who are thirsty for material Rasas. The ones who are qualified to relish poetry are of two types –

- (1) the poet
- (2) the connoisseur

For the rest, literary Rasa is a sealed book. The door to relish poetry is closed for them. Those who have the inherent power to create, as well as relish poetry are called 'poets' and those who have the inherent power only to relish poetry are called 'connoisseurs' or 'appreciators'.

"bījam prākṭana saṃskāra viśeṣah kāvyarobhih. Rośća dvidha nirmāṭṛrmūlāh svādamilaśća yam vinā nirmāṭum svādayitum na śakyaṭe."

– (Alamkāra Kaustubha 1.9)

Meaning – Acquired impression is the seed that gives rise to a poet. It acts as a fertile soil. This soil is again of two types – one, which gives rise to the power of creativity and another that gives rise to the ability to relish Rasa. Without this seed one can neither create nor relish poetry."

LET US COUNT THE NUMBER OF GREAT POETS

While deciding the number of great poets, Anandavardhana Ācārya of the 9th Century has written in his book 'Dhvanyāloka' –

"Although there are many authors in this world, only five or six of them can be called truly great poets." In the next one thousand or twelve hundred years, eight or ten more great poets have appeared. Anandavardhan has only counted the number of Sanskrit poets. Now we know of a much greater literary world. So the number of great poets too have increased for us. In spite of this their number is limited.

"kim kāvyena kāvyestasya kim kāndena dhanusmatah, parasya hṛḍaye lagnam na ghurṇayati yacchirah" - (Ancient Proverb)

Meaning - "What is the use if an archer shoots an arrow that does not pierce the heart and make the head giddy with pain? Similarly, what is the use of the creation of a poet if it does not pierce the heart and make the head giddy with pleasure?" The poet whose creation makes one's heart filled with such pleasure is indeed a great poet.

PROVED DEFINITION OF AN APPRECIATOR

Just as poetic talent is very rare, the number of appreciators is also handful. Both poetic talent and the ability to relish poetry are Divine gifts. After reading Milton's poem, some tasteless scientist had commented – "But then, what does this prove?" This is a famous statement. From this we realize that the power to relish poetry is also not very common. We have already mentioned Rasa-desire or impression. But only an acquired desire cannot make an appreciator. That is why Abhinava Guptācārya has said –

"yeṣām kāvyānuśilana abhyāsavasat viṣḍibhūte manomukure varṇaṇiyāṭanmayibhāvana yogyaṭā te hṛḍaya samvāḍa bhaja sahṛḍayah." - (purport to Dhanyāloka) Meaning - " An appreciator is not only one who is born with the acquired impression of relishing poetry, but he has also purified his heart (has got rid of passion and ignorance) due to constant study of poetics. In such a heart a novel quality arises. That is, he gets lost in the moods of the heroes and heroines described in the poem. He starts feeling the sorrow and happiness of the poetic characters as his own.

The latter rhetoricians have accepted the above definition of an appreciator. Sahitya Darpan says –

"parasya na parasyeți mameți na mameți ca, țadasvade vibliavadeh paricchedo na vidyate."

Meaning - "while relishing Rasa, we do not feel that it is happening to others and not to me, or these are my expressions and not theirs." An appreciator feels the conversation and activities of the characters as his own.

We have stated - "poets are born not made". This is well accepted by everybody. We think it is impossible to become a great poet simply by studying poetry or by one's own efforts. But one who is born with the inherent impression of Rasa, can be made into an appreciator by carefully studying poetics. Dr. Sushil Kumar De has said - "the sahrdaya (appreciator) is also born not made.." We agree only partly with him. We have clearly stated that an appreciator has to be born with an inherent desire to relish poetic Rasa. But we would like to add that a salirdaya has to be born as well as made. We do not want to make statements about material Rasas. But where devotional Rasa is concerned we can state most definitely that an appreciator can be made; otherwise the term 'devotional practise' becomes meaningless, and the science and principles of devotion become failures. Of course, it is needless to say that even in Bhakṭi-Rasa, an appreciator has to be born with the inherent impression of Blukti or devotion. Hence it once more becomes clear that to become devoid of the modes of passion and ignorance, one has to study transcendental literature.

THE NUMBER OF APPRECIATORS IS VERY FEW

We have already mentioned that just as real poets are very rare, the number of appreciators is also few. In this context Rasikottama has quoted an ancient proverb in his book Premapattana –

"pratah pankaja kutmala dyutipadam tat kesara ullasavan, artho'bhyantara saurabha pratinibhan vyangam camatkari yat, dvitrayir yat rasikaisciran sahrdayair bhrngairivasvadyate, tatkavyam no punah pramatta kukaversat kinci dujjalpitam."

Meaning – "The creation of great poets is like a bloomed fragrant lotus. The stanzas of the poem are akin to the petals of the lotus, the meaning is like the filament, the sound is its fragrance, and its sentiment is just like honey."

Only two or three rasika salırdayas can relish that poem-lotus. If the numbers of appreciators is so very few then how rare indeed are great poets!

QUALIFICATIONS TO RELISH RASA

While deciding on the qualifications to relish Rasa, Jiva Goswami has written in his purport to B. R. S. 2. 5. 123 –

"tatra tāvat pancavidhā janāh paramṛsyante, bhāvyabhakṭāh, bhāvakābhakṭah, prāgnya, agnya, grāmyaśceṭi."

Meaning –"While deciding so as to who is qualified to relish Rasa, we find there are five types of people in this world –

(1) gramya (uncouth) - They are without any Rasa-feeling or Rasa-desire. Jiva Goswami has compared them to animals.

- (2) Ajña (ignorant) Those who may be learned in scriptures such as Vedas, but have no knowledge of the science of the science of Rasa.
- (3) Prajna (learned) Those who are learned in the science of Rasa, but cannot truly relish the science of Rasa.
- (4) Bhavaka (thoughtful) Those who are not only well learned but can also relish Rasa. They can also be termed as 'one who practises Rasa' or 'one who meditates on the feelings of the bhavya'
- (5) Bhavya (object of thought) Before going into the definition of the fifth category we need to know a few things.

Authors of material Rasa have described Rasa as out-of-thisworld, continuous, self-luminous, blissful and conscious. But they have not mentioned anything about the true form of bhāva (feeling, idea, thought, emotion or sentiment). According to poet Karnapura, bhāva is the seed of Rasa-relish. It is engrained in a mind filled with pure goodness and devoid of passion and ignorance. When this seed becomes stable in the mind of a devotee, this state of mind is called 'permanent bhāva'.

The author of Sāhiṭya Darpan has written -"As a result of Saṭṭvaguṇa, some fortunate ones become capable of relishing Rasa.". Elsewhere he has written - "When the permanent bhāva is expressed, the result is 'Rasa'." This indicates that there is some relation between the rise of Saṭṭvaguṇa and permanent bhāva. Common authors of Rasa have not stated anything clearly about this topic. The author of Sāhiṭya Darpan says that Saṭṭvaguṇa rises in the mind of a reader by constantly studying transcendental literature. But he has not been able to prove the connection between the rise of Saṭṭvaguṇa and permanent bhāva. Only the authors of Bhakṭi Rasa have discussed nicely about this subject. We shall slowly proceed towards it. While discussing Rasa, the ordinary books on Rasa often appear vague and indistinct. These failures are more than overcome by Devotional literature. The principles of devotional science are always flawless and decisive. But due to the lack of devotional culture and detailed discussion on this topic, this science is not receiving the popularity it deserves – this is a cause of sorrow.

Anyway, bhavya are those who have attained total success in the relish and practise of Rasa. In devotional Rasa, bhavya are the self-realized devotees or associates of the Divine pastimes such as Kṛṣṇa's parents, friends etc.

WHAT IS RASA MADE UP OF?

According to the Rasa-scientists, when a great poet pens down a poem, the cause of Rasa-relish is called vibhāva, the activities are called anubhāva and the ones who help in relishing Rasa are called sahāya.

Vibhava - The cause of Rasa is called vibhava. It is of two types - (1) ālambana (2) uddīpana

- (1) Alambana It means independent. The hero and heroine depend on each other. So they are said to have alambana vibhava. The hero is the source of Rasa for the heroine while the heroine finds Rasa in the hero. The hero is called 'viṣayālamban' (subject of Rasa) and the heroine is called āsraya ālamban (object of Rasa).
- (2) Uddipana It means excitant. The youth, beauty and qualities of the hero and heroine are called uddipana vibhava (excitant causes of Rasa). Whatever is conducive to their love, such as the spring season, song of the cuckoo, sweet breeze, moonlight etc. constitutes uddipana vibhava. Example –

" dīrghi kurvam apṭumadakalaṃ kūjiṭaṃ saRasānām, praṭyuṣesu sfutaṭa kamala modamaitri kasayah' yatra strinam harati surata glanim anganukulah, sipravatah priyatama iva prarthana catukarah."

– Meghaduta by Kālidasa

Meaning -"The breeze blowing across the Siprā River during early morning is cool and extremely fragrant due to the contact with fully bloomed lotuses. It carries the sweet and joyous calls of the cranes. Endowed with such qualities, the breeze steals the copulation-languor of women like a lover who is skilful in body movements and sweet speech."

Here, early morning, riverbanks, soft breeze, fragrance of lotus flowers and sweet cooing of cranes are the excitant causes of the hero and heroine's desire.

Anubhāva - Due to the above incidents, the lovers display certain activities. For example, soft smiles, glances, shyness, tears, shivering etc. These are called anubhāva. It is of two types - (1)Udbhāsvara (2) Sāṭṭoika

(1) Udbhāsvara means external expressions such as singing dancing etc.

(2) Sāttvika means minor expressions such as tears and shivering. Now you may ask, since tears and shivering are also external expressions, what is the difference between udbhāsvara and Sāttvika? To this the Rasa-scientist replies – "Although both are external expressions, udbhāsvara activities are displayed more easily, while tears and shivering are not ordinarily divulged unless and until the person is overwhelmed with emotions. Another difference is that udbhāsvara is voluntary and Sāttvika is involuntary."

Sancari vibhava - Like anubhava, few more bhavas are expressed. They are like anubhava, but because they appear and disappear from time to time, they are called sancari or 'passing moods'.

"unmajjanți nimajjanți sthāyinyamṛṭa vāridhau, urmivaț vardhayanțe yenām yanți tadrūpa ṭañcate ." - (B.R.S. 2.4.3.)

Meaning – "A calm and quiet sea and a wave-filled sea differ in appearance. The sancari bliavas enhance the beauty of the permanent mood like the rising and falling waves of the sea. " In Rasa-science, there are thirty-three types of sancari bliavas such as, joy, humility, sorrow etc.

While discussing Rasa, we have mentioned heroes and heroines because this Rasa is the most popular one. In Rasa-science it is called Maḍhura-Rasa (sweet Rasa) or ujjwala-Rasa (brilliant Rasa). It is the topmost Rasa. Hence it is also called 'Angiras' (principal Rasa). The vibhāva that makes Maḍhura-Rasa appear in the hearts of the hero and the heroine is called Maḍhurā-raṭi (sweet passion). This is the permanent bhāva of Maḍhura-Rasa.

Now let us see what we mean by sthayi bhava or permanent bhava. A particular special bhava of the audience and actors is called sthayi bhava. Earlier we have defined 'bhava.' The western psychologists classify mind into three categories – knowing, feeling and willing. Bhava refers to the feeling or emotion. In Moral Philosophy emotion has been classified. But it is not stated how these emotions can be transformed into Rasa.

" vibhāva anubhāva vyābhićāri saṃyogāṭ Rasa niṣpaṭṭih "
-Bharaṭamuni
-"vibhāva anubhāva Sāṭṭvika vyābhićāri, bhāva 'Rasa' haya mili ei ćāri."
-C.C

"yathā khaṇda marićāḍināṃ sammelanāḍ pūrva iva kaśćiḍāsvāḍah prapānakārase sañjāyaṭe, vibhāvāḍi sammelanāḍi hapi ṭạtḥe tyārṭhah ". –Sāhitya Darpan

"sthayi bhava mile yadi vibhava anubhava, Sattvika vyabhicari bhavera milane, Kṛṣṇa Bhakṭi Rasa hay amṛṭa asvaḍane, yaiche ḍaḍhi siṭa ghṛṭa marica karpura milane Rasala hay amṛṭa Maḍhura." – (C.C Maḍhya.19# chapter) "sṭhayi samavaikarṇam alambana uḍḍipana vibhavau nimiṭṭa karaṇaṃ, sṭhayino vikara viśeṣo samavayikaraṇaṃ Rasabhi vyakṭevera na ṭu Rasasya."

– (Alamkāra Kaustubha, 5th ray)

Meaning – "The permanent mood is the inseparable cause of Rasa. Uddipana vibliāva is its instrumental cause while the activities of the hero, the silent activities and the passing moods are all incidental (not inherent) causes of Rasa. These give rise to the various expressions of Rasa, but do not cause Rasa itself. Let us take the example of a delicious dish called 'Rasālā', which is made by adding a dash of salt, pepper, sugar, camphor and clarified butter to yogurt. All the ingredients have a taste of their own. But each one's taste is enhanced when they come together to form the 'Rasālā'. However, the taste of yogurt remains dominant. In the same way, the permanent mood is the main cause of Rasa, which is enhanced by the other ingredients such as the activities, beautiful surroundings, passing moods etc.

TWO TYPES OF POEMS - (1) VISIBLE (2) AUDIBLE

We have already said that the material heroes and heroines cannot relish Rasa. The only way to relish Rasa is to be an appreciator and then constantly study the works of great poets. Poems or literature are of two types – (1) visible and (2) audible. In visible poems (such as, in dramatics) we come across three parties – the original characters, the actors and the audience. In the same way, the audible poems have the original characters, the narrator and the audience. Mālaṭi and Mādhava are the characters of the drama 'Mālaṭi-Mādhava'. Those who imitate them are called actors. The appreciating public is called 'audience'.

THE RELISHERS OF THE POEM

The authors of material Rasa have proved logically that the characters and actors cannot relish Rasa. It is the appreciating audience that relishes Rasa. This is because it is only the audience that gets the chance to see or listen attentively and become engrossed. It is needless to say that Mālaṭi and Māḍhava would not relish the performance of Mālaṭi-Māḍhava. The actors would focus more on entertaining the audience and hence would not be able to relish rasa in an engrossed mood. In case they become engrossed in relishing the mood of the characters, the drama would take a beating and would have to stop. Hence it is only the appreciating audience that relishes Rasa.

But this is the case in relation to material Rasa literature only. Earlier we have mentioned four opinions on this subject. We have stated that devotional Rasa-scientists accept that all the three – the characters, the actors as well as the audience – all relish Rasa. Jiva Goswāmi has said –

"tatrāpi visesato'nikaryesu tat parikaresu yesām nityameva hṛḍayamaḍhya rūdhah purṇo raso nukarṭaḍisu sancaraṭi." – (P. S. 3rd chapter)

Meaning – "The original characters, that is, the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His associates, are completely filled with Rasa. Hence the Rasa present in them is transmitted through the actors as well. Divine Rasa flows through the veins of those who act in transcendental dramas. For example,

"purve dasaratha bhave ek natavara, rama vanavase edilena kalevara."
–(Ćaiṭanaya Bhagavaṭa, Aḍi Lila, 1.7)

Meaning - "In ancient times, an actor playing the role of King Dasaratha actually left his body on hearing that Rama had left for the forest".

The transcendental power of the original King Dasaratha's relish was transmitted through the actor as well. In case of audible devotional poems too we notice that the narrator is capable of relishing wonderful Rasa. To prove this point Kṛṣṇaḍāsa Kavirāja Goswāmi has written thus –

"Caitanya Mahāprabhu visited the temple of Lord Viṣṇu in the holy place called Pāpanāsana. Thereafter he proceeded to Śn̄ Rangam. There resided a Vaiṣṇava Brahmin who recited the Bhagavad Giṭā in the temple. He blissfully recited eighteen chapters of the Holy Giṭā. But because he read incorrectly, the people made fun of him. Some people laughed at him while the others criticized. But the Brahmin did not mind. He continued to recite in ecstasy. With his hair standing at end, tears rolling down, body trembling and perspiring, he went on reciting. Seeing this Mahāprabhu became very happy.

He asked him - "Sir, What meaning of the The Gitā gives you so much pleasure?" The Brahmin replied - " I am ignorant and uneducated. I cannot understand any meaning of the The Gitā. My Spiritual Master ordered me to read the The Gitā daily. So I read it, sometimes correctly and sometimes incorrectly. I only know that my Lord Kṛṣṇa is sitting prettily on Arjuna's chariot, reigns in hand; my beautifully dark-complexioned Lord has a whip in His hand to drive His horses. He is giving nectarine instructions to Arjuna. Beholding this so very beautiful scene, I go into ecstasy. I can see Him every time I read the The Gitā. Hence I just cannot give up reciting." -(C.C. Madhya. 9th ch)

From the above incident we can see how wonderfully the narrator can relish Rasa while reciting a poem. The real purpose of writing this book is to reveal the wonderful Rasa of Bhakṭi. That is why, even while discussing material Rasa, we are mentioning the special characteristics of Bhakṭi Rasa from time to time. It is needless to say that, in spiritual Rasa, when the actor or narrator himself relishes Rasa to such a miraculous extent, then, what pleasure the audience may experience, is anybody's guess!

The audience relishes Rasa according to their permanent mood. The ingredients of the literary piece enhance their permanent mood. This gives rise to Rasa. It is better to mention at this stage that we consider even an appreciating poet to be qualified of relishing Rasa. Hemaćandra Suri has written in his purport to 'Kavyanuśasana' –

"kaverapi bhavakavastha yameva Rasasvadah sampadyate pṛṭhageva hi kavitvat bhavakatvam."

Meaning – "Just because a person is a poet, it is not necessary that he will be able to relish Rasa. He will be able to do so only if he is an appreciator."

Some people say- "kāvyasya rasmādhurim kavirvetti na tatkṛtih."

Meaning - "The sweetness of the Rasa of the poem is not known even to the poet himself. But it is known to the appreciating reader."

From the above statements we gather that the original characters and even the poet himself may not relish Rasa. But the audience may do so. But we do not agree with this opinion. Because really speaking, the relish of the audience is second-hand. After all, the appreciator relishes Rasa according to the feelings of the poet himself. Of course, there are some third rate poets who have written such stuff that they have never experienced themselves. The scientists of Bhakṭi-Rasa do not wish to call them as 'poets'. According to them, a poet must have both qualifications – the ability to create poetry and the ability to relish poetry. Otherwise, he will not be qualified to be called a 'poet'.

Śripad Baladev Vidyabhusan has written in Sahitya Kaumadi -

"śakţih prakţana saṃskāra viśeṣah kāvyoṭpāḍaka svāḍaika heṭuh yam binā kāryam na udsayati, uditam va upahāsaya bhavaṭi." Meaning - "Poetic ability is a special quality which is acquired by a person from previous births. This inherent talent is the only cause for creating poetry and making them enjoyable. Without this inherent talent, poetry would not be forthcoming,"

Hence it is our firm conclusion that even though the original characters do not relish Rasa, if the great poets relish their experiences, they would enable the audience to relish Rasa.

Earlier we have said that the dominant mood of the hero and heroine is that of sweet passion or Madhurā-raţi. But they do not relish any poetry themselves. The audience is relishing the poetry. The audience alone is sitting and watching the drama or listening to the poetry. Their bluava and vibhava are creating Rasa in them. In Pritisandarbha it is written -

"bhava evabhih sampannah prayanti Rasarupatam ".

Meaning - "When emotion (bhava) attains maturity, it takes the form of Rasa."

Bharata Muni, the ancient author of Rasa-science has written in Natya Śastra -

"vibhāva anubhāva vyābhićari samyogād Rasa nispattih."

Meaning - "vibhava, anubhava and sancari vibhava together bring about a dominant mood in the audience."

The author of Sahitya Darpana has written -

"ṭasmāḍalaukikah saṭyam veḍya sahrdaayirayam, pramanam ćarvanaivatra svabhinne vidusam matah."

Meaning - "Rasa is out-of-this world; only appreciators can experience it. The learned ones think that experiencing Rasa and Rasa itself are inseparable."

In Kavya Prakasa it is written - "Rasa is truly an extraordinary phenomenon. While relishing Rasa, it flares up and enters the heart, it embraces every organ of the body, appeasing it with ambrosia, and one becomes oblivious of everything else. We feel as if we are uniting with the Supreme." Hence, Rasa is 'expressed', not 'produced', 'measured' nor 'consumed'.

THE PERMANENT MOOD OF THE AUDIENCE

While relishing Rasa we should have special consideration for the nuclience. The original characters, actors and the poet may have some dominant mood. But we want to pay special attention to the dominant mood of the audience. Sthayi bhava (dominant or permanent mood) has been defined in many books such as, Daśarupaka, Sahitya Darpana etc. But Kavi Karnapura has best defined this most important term in the following manner -

"asvadankura kando'sti dharmah kascana cetasah rajasrtamobhyam lunasya śuddha sattvataya satah, sa sthhayi kathyate vignyair vibhavasya prthaktaya, prthagvidhatvam yatyesa samajikataya satam." - (A.K.)

Meaning - "Sthayi bhava is the root cause of relish in the heart tilled with pure goodness and one which is devoid of the modes of passion and ignorance. This sthayi-bhava is crystal-clear and the root cause of Rasa-relish."

When the audience relishes a poem expressing Madhura-Rasa, their sthayi-bhava is called Madhura-rati. When they relish a poem expressing vira-Rasa (bravery), Their sthayi-bhava is called 'enthusiasm' and when they relish a poem expressing adbhuta-Rusa (strange happenings), their sthayi-bhava is called 'surprise'.

Now, a pertinent question arises - "The mood is called ' sthayibliava ' or 'permanent '. But it changes from poem to poem, and also according to various vibhavas (since one's mood cannot remain permanent). Then what is the point in naming it so? In reply to this question, Viśvanatha Ćakravarti has written -

"yaṭhā eka eva sfatikah jabākusumāḍi nānā paḍārthanāṃ saṅgāṭ kaḍāćiṭ rakṭah kaḍāćiṭ piṭah kaḍāćiṭ śyāma iṭyāḍi viviḍhakaro bhavaṭiṭi. Ṭaṭhaivaika eva sṭhāyirupo ḍharmāh vira Rasāḍi poṣakānāmnānāviḍha vibhāvānāṃ kaḍāćiṭ uṭsāharūpah kaḍāćiṭ vismayarūpaḥ kaḍāćiċchokarūpo dharmāh prapancanṭargaṭa sāmājikānāṃ svaċcha raṭimaṭameva Rasāsvāḍakah, na ṭu pārṣaḍānām nava ṭaḍanugaṭānām sāḍhakānañća, ṭeṣānṭu svaṭahsiḍḍha eva ye ye sṭhāyino varṭanṭe ṭe eva Rasāsvāḍaka bhavanṭiṭi gñyeyam."

- (purport to A.K.)

Meaning – "A crystal bowl takes various colors such as red, yellow or black depending on the color of the articles kept in it, viz., shoe-flowers. In the same way, the audience whose heart is good and clear, relishes various Rasas such as 'bravery' etc. which are nourished by their permanent mood."

The above statement refers to the relish of material literature only, and not to the relish of Bhakţi-Rasa. The eternal associates of the Lord and their followers relish Rasa only according to their permanent mood. The causes of Sakhya-Rasa (friendly) will not trigger relish in those who are in permanent conjugal mood. Similarly, those who are in Sakhya Rasa will not relish a situation evoking parental sentiment. In the same way, the devotees who are following in the footsteps of the eternal associates of the Lord will not relish Rasa in situations that are contrary to their moods.

In the case of the ordinary audience, the permanent mood is one that is clear and which can assume different moods. But in the devotees, the permanent mood is truly 'permanent'. Anyway, we were discussing the process in which the audience relishes Rasa. Alamkara Kaustubha is considered to be a text on spiritual Rasa since nowhere in the book, there are examples of ordinary heroes and heroines. This is why, the permanent mood of the audience is called 'pure goodness' and not only 'goodness'. Jīva Goswāmi has said -

"atra śuddhasattvamnāma bhāgavatāh svaprakāśika svarūpaśakteh sumvidyakhya vṛṭṭih, na tu māyāvrṭṭih viśeṣah.....śuddhasattva viśeṣaṭvam nāma caṭra ya svarūpa śakṭi vṛṭyanṭara lakśana hlāḍinināmnī mahāśakṭistaḍiya sāra vṛṭṭi samaveṭa – ṭaṭ sāraṃ saṭvaṃ vveṭyeva ganṭavyam." – (Purport to B.R.S.1.3.1)

Meaning – "The permanent mood of the audience is said to arise out of the pure goodness of the heart, because, permanent mood of devotional Rasa is made up of the pleasure potency of God Himself which is the root of the entire force of consciousness."

Visvanatha Čakravarți has also written – "Rajas tamasorbhavena sumajikanam avidya rahityam atastesam suddha sațtvamapi na maya orțți rupam apițu, cidrupameva. Ataeva tesam Rasasvadakaścițta nistha dharmo'pi hladinisakteranandatmaka vrttirupa eva na țu jadatmaka, luthatve bhava svarupasya jadatatmaka tadrsa dharmasya vibhavadibhih kuranaivanandatmaka Rasarupatanupapațteh na hi jada parinama svarupa ananda bhavațiți."

Meaning – " 'Devoid of the modes of passion and ignorance' means that the audience should be devoid of material ignorance. This means that the pure goodness of their heart is not caused by the material potency of God, but rather due to His Spiritual l'otency. [Please refer the glossary for further explanation on the potencies of the Lord] Hence, their mind that relishes Rasa is also tilled within the pleasure potency of the Lord, and not filled with any material quality. The material vibliavas can never give rise to Rusa, since true bliss cannot be produced by worldly things."

BliaktiRasamrta Sindhu is a pure transcendental text on devotional Rusa. Although we have accepted Alamkara Kaustubha as a transcendental text on Rasa, there are some differences in the matter of analysis. Hence Visvanatha Cakravarti has stated—

" BhakṭiRasamṛṭa Sinḍhau vibhava sṭhayi-vibhava Rasaḍinam ya yah prakṛiya kaṭhiṭah ṭaḍbinna evaṭra granṭhe prakṛiya alaṃkārikānāṃ anuroḍhenokṭa aṭaeaa kaćiṭ kećiṭ prakṛiya nāṭyanṭavićaRasaha." - (Purport to Alamkara Kaustubha)

Meaning – "Whatever different processes of Rasa is described in a BhakṭiRasamṛṭa Sinḍhu, has been incorporated in this text also. But certain other processes do not pass the test of critical scrutiny (in the context of devotional Rasa)."

STHAYI BHAVA - IN THE MODE GOODNESS, PURE GOODNESS AND SPECIALLY PURE GOODNESS

Thus we see that according to the author of Sahitya Darpana, sthayi bhava requires the mode of 'goodness', while the author of Alamkara Kaustubha states that it arises out of 'pure goodness' and BhaktiRasāmṛṭa Sindhu is of the opinion that it is nurtured by specially pure goodness'. Here we would like to mention that the sthayi bhava of the Rasa and the audience might not be one and the same. Rasa may have sorrow, anger, enthusiasm etc. and these qualities are found in all living beings in small or large quantities. But this does not mean that all living beings have this sthayi bhava and can relish Rasa. Only those who have got rid of passion and ignorance, under scriptural guidance, and their hearts have been filled with goodness, can relish the sthavi bhava of the Rasa. Just as love for Kṛṣṇa arises in a pure heart only out of hearing His Divine pastimes, and cannot be acquired by jnana-yoga or any other method, in the same way, although we may purify our hearts by some spiritual process, we are not qualified to relish Rasa unless and until we are trained to do so under the guidance of the rules of Rasa-science.

Anyway we were discussing how the material Rasa-scientists have said that sthayi-bhava arises out of the mode of 'goodness' and ot of 'pure goodness'. The mode of ignorance covers our mind, passion throws it in turmoil while goodness illuminates the mind.

The Gita says-"sattvat sañjayate jñanam".

Meaning - "Knowledge arises out of goodness".

Sattvaguṇa is pure, clean and soft. Hence we accept that the hearts tilled with goodness is qualified to relish Rasa. The material Rasascientists say that the Rasa-relish arising out of such Sattvaguṇa is tree from everything material and is equal to realizing the Supreme. But this statement appears theoretical since we have not heard of anyone going into an ecstasy or samādhi while relishing material Rasa. Such Rasa-culture and so much 'devoid of passion and ignorance' is a rare thing in this world. Well, we do not scoff totally at their statement either. Since, relish of great literatures may not be akin to realizing the Supreme, but they do cause immense pleasure. Dr. S. K. Dey has called it half-practical and half-theoretical". We feel this is true.

THE INTEREST IN LITERATURE ARISES OUT OF RASA-DESIRE

Firstly, an audience starts taking interest in poetics due to a desire for Rasa. Those who have this desire, their hearts are more devoid of passion and ignorance as compared to others. In Alamkara Kaustubha it is written –

"svagața Rasa vāsanā dhauța rajastamasa svaccha țareșu samājikānām cetahsu."

Meaning – "The hearts of a decent audience are washed clean with Rasa-desire, is devoid of passion and ignorance and hence cleaner than others."

BHAKTIRASA - ITS PROCESS, ASSOCIATES AND TYPES

While discussing the process, associates and types of Bhakṭi-Rasa, Srīla Rūpa Goswāmi has stated –

"Bhakṭinirḍhuṭa ḍoṣānāṃ pRasannojjvala ćetasām,

Bhaktisukhāśriyam, premāntarangabhūtāni krtyanyavanutisthāṭam, bhaktānam hṛḍi rajanti samskāra yugalojjvala, raṭirānanḍarupaiva niyamana tu rasyaṭām, Kṛṣnāḍibhirvibhavaḍyairgaṭairanubhavaḍhwani, praudhānanḍa camaṭkārakāṣthamapaḍyaṭe parām."

Meaning – " (How to arouse Rasa) One whose heart is flawless and hence it is joyful and brilliant because of devotion, one who is devoted to God, associated with devout rasikas for entertainment, one whose sole purpose of life is to love the lotus-feet of Lord Govinda, and is always engaged in hearing about, and glorifying Kṛṣṇa, in the hearts of such a devotee, the inherent and acquired Rasa-desire will be able to relish Rasa caused by Lord Kṛṣṇa and will reach the topmost bliss."

Ordinary Rasa-scientists have not mentioned any such process by which one may relish Rasa. But the scientists of Bhakti-Rasa have discussed such process in detail in many books. Hence we wish to make the statement – "a devotee-sahrdaya can be made."

EQUALIZATION

While studying literature, a phenomenon takes place in the heart of the audience that is filled with goodness. It is called 'equalization'. Jiva Goswami, Rupa Goswami and Viśvanaṭha Cakravarṭi, who are Bhakṭi Rasa-scientists, are of the opinion that equalization takes place due to some inexpressible power of devotional passion. Now let us discuss this phenomenon slightly.

"parāgaṭa sukha duhkha bhāvanā yamanukula prāya ĉiṭṭavaṃ saṭṭvam " - (Dasarupakam)

Meaning - " 'sattva' means the tendency to feel others' sorrow and joy as one's own."

Due to this 'sattva', an appreciating audience feels the joys and sorrows of the dramatic characters as their own. Literature has a power due to which the audience becomes one with the heroes and heroines unknowingly.

"sakţirasţi vibhāvādeh kāpi sādhāranikrtau, pramaţā tadabhedena svām yuay pratipadyte" - (Bharata Muni)

Meaning – " The vibhavas have such a power that the audience starts identifying with the original characters."

In the early stages of equalization one feels for a moment that he himself is the hero , and the next moment he feels that he is not the hero but a reader or a part of the audience. The definition of 'equalization' is given in *Bhakti*Rasāmṛṭa Sinḍhu in the following way –

"eṣāṃ svarūpa sambandha niyama nirṇayohiyah, sādhāranyaṃ tudevokṭam bhāvanāṃ purvasuribhih. Alaukikya prakrṭyeyam sudvruha Rusasṭhiṭih, yāṭra sādhāranaṭayā bhāvah sādhu sfuranṭayani

-(B. R. S. 2.5.101-102)

Meaning – "Equalization is the phenomenon by which the audience sometimes feels one with the various bhāvas of the poem and other times different."

This is difficult to understand because it is supernatural. The author of Sāhitya Darpaṇa says –

"Vyapar'sti vibhavadernamna sadharanikṛti, tat prabhavena yasyasan puthodhi plavanadayah. Utsahadi samudvodhah sadharanyabhimaantah, nṛṇamapi samudradi laṃghnadau na duṣyati. Sadharanyena artyadirapi utdvat pratṛyate."

Meaning – "The *bhāva*s have a power called 'equalizing'. Due to this, the audience becomes one with the original characters. As a result the audience feels as if they are only crossing the ocean just like Lord Rāma in Rāmāyana. Equalization enables people to feel enthusiasm and interest in the play. Hence it is not a bad thing."

Viśvanatha Ćakravarti has said -

"Atha kadacit satam madhye Ramayana pathe Hanumatah samudra langhanam agatam tat srutva tatstha kaścit sahrdaya bhakta tadrsaRasaveśena lajjasamkocadi kamanaveksya swayamapi samudra langhanartham sabhamadhye cukurda. Drsyanatyepi kaściddaśaratha rupadhari sahrdayantah 'Ramo vanam jagameti' srutva Daśarathasya bhavaveśenasvayamapi pranam tatajeti loke mahati prasiddhirasit."

Meaning – "Once Rāmāyana was being narrated in a gathering. When the narrator started describing how Lord Hanuman was about to jump in order to cross the ocean, a devotee who was so absorbed in the narration that he himself jumped up amidst everybody without any shyness or hesitation. Similarly, an appreciating actor who was playing the role of King Daśaraṭha actually died on hearing that Rāma has left for the forest."

Noting this axiom, the author of Sahitya Darpana has said -

"Parasya no parasyeți, mameți no mameți ca ."

Meaning - "It is I, not someone else, it is someone else, not I."

Equalization is a method of Rasa-relish. Abhinava Gupṭācārya has written in his purport to Nātya Sasṭra -

"Asahṛdyo'pi sahṛdayo bhavaṭi."

Meaning – " The one who is not qualified to relish literary Rasa will become qualified by the process of equalization."

So far, in a nutshell, we have discussed -

- (1) Rasa-desire, which results in
- (2) Literary-interest,

- (3) Arousal of sattva-guna,
- (4) Equalization, which results in the
- (5) Arousal of more sattva-guna

The next stage is the phenomenon of relish.

"Tadasvade vibhavadeh paricchedo na vidyate." - (Sahitya Darpan)

RELISH OR ABSORPTION

During true relish the good audience feels non-different from the heroes and the heroines of the literature. During equalization, mometimes one feels non-different and sometimes different from the characters. But during relish, the sense of being different from the characters disappears altogether and one feels totally non-literent from them. This has been called 'absorption' by Abhinava Gupta. He too has defined equalization as sometimes identifying and at other times non-identifying with the heroes and heroines. It creates a similar mood in the actors and audience. Hence new devotees are also able to relish Rasa just like the advanced devotees. It has been proved that relishing by equalization is better than direct relish of a Rasa. Let us discuss this point more finely.

L'QUALIZATION WITH THE ORIGINAL CHARACTERS IS DIFFERENT FROM EQUALIZATION WITH THEIR MOOD

While going through the story of Nala-Damayanti, sometimes an appreciating reader feels that he is Nala himself, and is in love with Damayanti. Others feel that it not so. They feel – "I am not in love with Damayanti, but with my own ladylove and her picture in arising in my mind." This is called equalization of mood. The author has described the pleasure-sports of Nala-damayanti during the night. We do not think it is in good taste for a reader to consider himself as King Nala in this situation. Hence we are more in favor of 'equalization with the mood '. Just as it is very rare to find a flawless literature, it is also very rare to find equalization. By discussing material Rasa-science, we have reached one conclusion that by 'equalization', a devotee slowly advances on the path of Rasa-relish. Material Rasa-scientists explain this phenomenon by citing the examples of unification and separation of worldly heroes and heroines. The author of Sāhitya Darpan has written about unification –

"Śunyam vāsa grham vilokya sayanaduṭṭhaya kiñcicchānairnidrāvyajamupagaṭasya suciram nirvanay paṭyurmukham. Viśraddhām paricumbya jāṭa pulakam ālokya gaṇdaṣthalīm lajjānamramukhi priyena hasaṭā bālā ciraṃ cumbiṭa."

Meaning – "The newly-wed bride woke up and found the marriage-hall empty. So she raised herself slightly and observed her husband (who was pretending to be asleep) for a long time, and then softly kissed his lips. On seeing his cheeks quivering, she realized the truth and was embarrassed. Her husband started laughing and kissed her for a long time." This author has tried his level best to make the reader undergo equalization and relish this Rasa as if it was happening to them. But he has been unsuccessful. In Kavyaprakasa it is written –

"pura iva sfuran, hṛḍayamiva praviśan, sarvangamivalingān, brahmāsvāḍamivanubhāvayan, anyaṭra sarvamiva ṭiroḍaḍhaṭ, lokoṭṭara camaykāri śṛṅgāradhikāh Rasah."

Meaning – "In literature a scene should be described so vividly that it should penetrate the very core of the heart, sending vibrations through the entire body and it should eclipse everything else. It should make one feel the rapturous bliss of sensing the Brahman. This emotion causes transcendental bliss and is known as various Rasas."

But it is extremely rare to find a piece of worldly literature that is flawless, capable of bringing about equalization and making one

GREAT WORLDLY LITERATURE HELP TO RELISH DIVINE RASA

It is seen that, even very dry and hard hearts do melt when they come in contact with great creations of great poets. Hence it is needless to say that appreciating readers will relish much more Rusa by reading these literary pieces. In fact, such readers are so great that ordinary people are not fit to sit near their feet even. In worldly literature, the descriptions of separation of lovers melt our hearts and are especially helpful in relishing Divine Rasa. Malati-Madhava is one such creation. Sri Rasikottamsa has mentioned in his book Premapattana – "The books such as Kādambari' and 'Mālaṭi-Madhava' prepare the foundation of relishing extraordinary Rasa and enable us to enjoy pure bliss while discussing the transcendental pastimes of the Divine couple Sri Rādhā-Krṣṇa. Hence we cannot overlook their contribution.

Many relishers of Divine Rasa consider the study of worldly literature favorable for devotional practise. But we would like to state that Bhakti could not be obtained without the association of pure devotees and their mercy. Worldly literature will be helpful to neophyte devotees who want to relish Divine Rasa, and whose hearts are, by and large, filled with Bhakti-Rasa. Avadhūta [Please refer Srimad Bhāgavaṭam] learnt from the natural activities of the birds and the animals. He accepted them as his Spiritual Master and obtained those lessons, which were favorable for his spiritual life. In the same way, great worldly literature will neither be destructive or deterrent to our devotional practise. Such great preceptor as Śrila Jiva Goswāmi has written in his book 'Sārvasamvādini'-

"Kāvyālaṃkāra- kāmatanṭra-ganḍharva kālastu ṭaṭṭaṭcariṭa māḍhurya anubhava vaiḍuṣya siḍḍheh."

Meaning – "The study of Rhetoric, the science of love-making and performing arts helps in experiencing the sweetness of the Supreme Personality of Godhead".

Here 'kāvyālaṃkāra' refers to worldly rhetoric and 'kamatantra' refers to 'Kāmasūṭra' of Vatsyayana, since any spiritual 'kamatantra' does not exist. Visvanatha Cakravarti has written in 'Suratākaṭhāmṛṭam' -

"smara-narapati-vararājye dharmah sarmaprado'yam adhisthah, vaṭsyāyana-muni-nirmiṭa paḍdhaṭyukṭasarena hi"

Meaning - "Lord Kṛṣṇa said -' Dear Rādhe, the kingdom of King Maḍana (God of Love) is ruled according to the laws of Sage Vaṭṣṣayana. Hence I have been ordered to behave thus by the great powerful King Maḍana who has been advised by Sage Vaṭṣṣayana.' "

The opinions of two preceptors are infallible – firstly, Bharata Muni and secondly, sage Vatsyayana. Srila Jiva Gosvāmi too, is not referring to any spiritual book of rhetoric or science of lovemaking.

Even Lord Ćaiṭanya, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the very embodiment of Bhakṭi-Rasa has relished Vraja-Rasa by uttering a verse from "Kavyaprakasa', a worldly literature. In this book, a worldly heroine says –

"Yah kaumāra harah sa eva hi varasţa eva ćaiţra ksapasţeconmiliţamālatisurabhayah praudhah kāḍambanīlah. Sa ćaivāsmi ṭaṭhāpi ṭaṭra suraṭavyāpāra līlā viḍhau, ravaroḍhasi veṭasi ṭaruṭale ćeṭah samuṭkanthaṭe."

Meaning – "A certain heroine is telling her friend – 'He who had stolen my virginity later on became my husband. It was a night in the month of Ćaiṭra (March – April). Now once again, that sweet night of Ćaiṭra has arrived. The same joyous South breeze carrying the scent of bloomed Mālaṭi flowers is blowing now also. I am the same person. Even then, I long for that night of our first meeting on the banks of the river Revā, under the Veṭasi tree. ' "

Mahāprabhu, who was in the mood of Rādhārāni, often repeated this verse. Nobody knew why. Only Śrī Swarūpa Dāmodara who was very close to Mahāprabhu realized the true meaning. He sang songs to bring out the inner meaning of the verse and enhanced Mahāprabhu's bliss. By the mercy of Mahāprabhu, Śrī Rūpa Goswāmi, who was a poet of transcendental Rasa, also understood the reason for uttering this verse. He wanted to reveal Mahāprabhu's heartfelt desire to the devotees. Hence, he created a verse in the mood of the earlier one. Viz. —

"Priyah so'yam Kṛṣṇa sahaćari Kurukśeṭra militastathā'ṃ sā Rāḍhā Taḍiḍamubhayoh saṅgaṃsukhaṃ, ṭaṭhā panṭah khelanmaḍhura murali pancama juṣe mano me aklinḍi pulinavipinaya spṛhayati."

Meaning – "On meeting Lord Kṛṣṇa at Kurukṣeṭra, Śrī Rāḍhā is telling her friend – 'O friend! He is the same Kṛṣṇa who had wandered in Vṛṇaḍāvaṇa with me. I am the same Rāḍhā. The pleasure of our meeting is the same. Even then, my heart longs to sport in the woodlands of Vṛṇḍāvaṇa only, on the banks of the River Yamunā, where Kṛṣṇa used to enchant the living and the non-living by playing the fifth note ever so sweetly on His flute."

Krsnadāsa Kavirāja Goswāmi says -

"Dear devotes, please listen to the meaning of this verse in short. When Mahaprabhu beheld Lord Jagannatha in Puri, his feelings were the same as that of Rādhārāni when she saw Lord Kṛṣṇa at Kurukśeṭra. Although He was close to Her, She thought thus - 'He is in royal clothing, surrounded by horses, elephants, and guards. Where is the cowherd boy? Where are the lonely gardens of Vṛṇḍāvaṇa? I will be satisfied only if I get Kṛṣṇa in the same mood in Vṛṇḍāvaṇa alone."

- (C.C)

Śrī Mahāprabhu relished the verse belonging to a worldly poem, in the mood of relishing Vraja-Rasa. By His own conduct Mahāprabhu taught the relishers of Bhakṭi-Rasa that if one chooses a substance that helps one to relish transcendental Bhakṭi-Rasa, then it will not be detrimental or an obstruction to one's devotion.

" By relishing the Rasa Himself, He taught the devotees since He was a touchstone of Love."

- (C. C.)

IT IS POSSIBLE TO RELISH BHAKTI-RASA WITH OR WITHOUT THE HELP OF ANY LITERARY PIECE

It is not as if any Divine or worldly literature is absolutely necessary to relish Bhakṭi-Rasa. It is possible to relish Bhakṭi-Rasa even without the help of such literature. Let us discuss this point in more detail. In the purport of Sāhiṭya-Darpaṇa it is written that, first the subject of Rasa (i.e. the hero and heroine) and their activities create an impression on the minds of the appreciating readers. This is followed by the arousal of passing and dominant moods. Later on, there is equalization, which results in relish. The subjects of Rasa, and their activities express a dominant mood. This mood is called 'Rasa'.

"Vibhavenanubhavena vyakṭah sancarina ṭaṭhā, Rasaṭāmeṭi raṭyāḍih sṭhāyibhavah saceṭasām." --- (S. D.)

Meaning - "The subjects, their activities and the passing moods (eg. Joy, sorrow etc.) express the dominant mood of the appreciator and culminate in 'Rasa'.

"Vibhāvādinā vyakṭah bhāva eva Rasaṭāmeṭi. " - (S.D.)

Meaning – " 'Rasa' results when the dominant mood is expressed through subjects, their activities etc."

When one relishes literature, the heart gets filled with Rasa. Noting this phenomenon, \acute{Sri} Jiva Goswāmi has written in Prītisandarbha –

"vibhāvāḍisfurṭiviśeṣavyakṭasfurṭiviśeṣa bhāgavaṭ prīṭireva BhakṭiRasāh

Meaning – 'The dominant mood of love arises in the heart of a devotee. Lord Kṛṣṇa who is the subject of love, and His associates, who are the objects of love, inspire it. This results in Bhakṭi-Rasa in the devotee. There are three groups in Bhakṭi-Rasa as well – the original characters, the actors and the audience. Now let us discuss and relish especially how the devotees relish Bhakṭi-Rasa.

The rhetoricians and worldly Rasa-scientists say that there is no way of relishing Rasa other than studying literature. They say this because the hero and his activities that brings about Rasa, is after all, created by literature. Śrīla Rūpa Goswāmi has written –

"vibhāvairanubhāvaiśća sāṭṭvikairvyābhićaribhih, svāḍyaṭvaṃ hṛḍibhakṭānāmiṭa śravanāḍibhih, eṣa kṛṣṇaraṭih sṭhāyibhāvo Bhakṭiraso bhuveṭ." – (B. R. S. 2.1.5)

Meaning – "When the devotee hears about the subject, i.e., Lord Krsna, His activities and all other associating and passing moods, his heart is filled with the dominant mood that is Love for Krsna. This results in Bhakti-Rasa. "

Some people feel that one cannot relish Divine Rasa or Bhakti-Rasa without studying Divine literature. They feel this way because only when the subject and his activities are described in literature, they can be called 'vibhāva', 'anubhāva' etc. In this context, the opinion of Śrīla Rūpa Goswāmi is as follows –

"Eteşanţu ţaţha bhave bhagavaţkavyanaţyayoh, sevamahuh param heţum kećitţaţpaksahraginah."

Meaning – "Some of them who love Divine literature are of the opinion that it is possible to realize various moods only by studying such literature."

Some people are supporters of Rhetoric. Hence they feel that the desire for Bhakţi is nourished and developed in the hearts of devotees only by studying Divine literature. But this principle is neither logical nor acceptable. It is true that worldly Rasa cannot be relished without taking the shelter of worldly literature. But this argument does not hold good in the case of relishing Divine Rasa simply because the characteristics of worldly Rasa do not apply to Divine Rasa. Worldly Rasa is fallible and subject to limitations and obstacles. Hence it is not possible to relish this Rasa. Bhakţi-Rasa does not possess these negative qualities. Hence it is not absolutely essential to take the support of literature-study in order to relish it. In Bhakţi-Rasa, the subject (Kṛṣṇa), the permanent moods and the inborn devotees are all transcendental. Hence it is possible to relish Bhakţi-Rasa without the help of any Divine literature.

The main cause of Bhakṭi-Rasa, who is also the subject, is none other than the out-of-this world, transcendental, unlimited, the destroyer of all obstacles, Lord Maḍhusuḍana (Kṛṣṇa). If we take

His shelter, then by His mercy all obstacles will be uprooted. He is destroyer of all sorrows. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is All-pervading, has infinite qualities, forms and pastimes. Hence we need not fear that He will be limited. The Lord is not worldly.

THE REAL DESCRIPTION OF SRI BHAGAVAN - THE SUBJECT OF BHAKTI-RASA

The ones who are born of Nature are material. Although Bhagavān is the source of Nature, He is beyond Her laws. Nature is only His external potency. He is above all material modes (guṇas). He implants the seed in Nature that makes her come alive. Although He creates the universe He is not touched by matter and is eternally blissful and conscious.

"Eṭaḍisanamisasya prakṛṭisṭho'pi tạḍguṇaih, na yujyaṭe taḍātmasṭhayiryaṭha buḍḍhisṭaḍāśraya." – (Bhāg.1.11.39)

Meaning - " The intellect of the ordinary mortal is linked to the joys and sorrows of the body. But God is not like that. In spite of being in contact with matter, He is not material. That is the proof of His Divinity."

In the same way, Bhakṭi, which enables us to relish Divine Rasa, is also free of all the limitations mentioned above. This is because Bhakṭi is the tendency of Śrī Bhagavān's spiritual, blissful potency. Śrī Balaḍeva Viḍyābhuṣaṇ has explained the verse "ādhyāyana mūtravatāh" (Veḍanta 3. 4. 12) in the following manner –

"HlādinisāRasamavetasamvidrūpaBhaktih saccidānandarase Bhaktiyoge tusthatutu śruteh. Itarathā bhāgavat-vsikāra hetuRasau na syāt. Ţatha blūtayastasya bhaktakayadivṛṭṭi tadātmena qavirbhūṭaya kriyākāratvam." – (Govinda Bhāsya)

Meaning - "Bhakti is the tendency of the essence of the joyous potency of the Lord. Sruti also says -'the eternal conscious and blissful Rasa is situated in Bhakţi-yoga.' If this were not true it would not have been possible to subjugate the Divine One by Bhakţi alone. This Bhakţi becomes one with the senses of the devotee and is expressed through various activities."

Now the question may arise- "Bhagavan and Bhakti are no doubt conscious and blissful. But the devotee is worldly, limited and obstacle-ridden. This is especially true in the age of Kali. Srīmaḍ Bhagavaṭam also says, -

"Prayenalpayuşah sabhya kalavasmin yugejanah , mandah sumandamatayo mandabhagyah hyupadrutah."

Meaning – "(Saunaka and the other sages said) – O Suta! In this age of Kali almost everyone has short life span, is idle, dull, problem-ridden and troubled by diseases and sorrows. When this is the sorry state of mortal mankind, how will it relish the transcendental, unlimited Bhagavān?"

Earlier we have already quoted Govinda-Bhāṣya. Bhakṭi becomes one with the devotee's senses. Bhakṭi is the property of the spiritual potency of the Lord. It slowly arises in the senses of the devotee due to hearing and chanting, and destroys the material nature of these senses. Then these senses become spiritual. Just as mercury and sulfur react with each other to form mercuric sulfate which is a totally new substance, due to hearing and chanting, the material tendencies of the devotee gets united with Bhakṭi and his senses become spiritual. When the devotee's heart becomes united with Bhakṭi, the result is 'PREM'.

"Vaiṣṇavera deha prakṛṭa kabhu noy, aprākṛṭa deha bhakṭera cidānanḍamay." – (C.C)

Meaning - "The body of a Vaişnava is never material. His body is transcendental, eternally blissful."

Hence by the mercy of Bhakṭi-Devi, who is a property of the spiritual potency of the Lord, the material senses of mortal mankind becomes spiritual and becomes capable of relishing Bhakṭi-Rasa.

Again, ancient rhetoricians say that Bhakţi cannot be classified as a 'Rasa.' This is because, relishable Rasa arises due to the affectionate relationship between the subject and the object of love, both of which have to be at the same level. But ,we see that, the person whom we adore, Śrī Bhagavān is situated on a much higher platform than that of a devotee. How can the relation between the two unequal beings be called 'Rasa'? Śrīla Jīva Goswāmi replies - "This objection is applicable to the demi-gods and demi-goddesses that are worldly, but not to Lord Kṛṣṇa, because He is the embodiment of Rasa and relates to His devotees on an equal platform. His mother ties Him with a rope, His friends climb on His shoulders and feed Him half-bitten fruits, while His sweethearts rebuke Him. Thus it is Bhakţi alone that brings the devotee and the Divine One on the same level and enables the fortunate devotee to relish Divine Rasa."

If you ask - "How can we gain that Bhakţi?", the answer is that Bhakţi is gained by the mercy of the Spiritual Master and Kṛṣṇa alone.

"Brahmanda bhramițe kono bhagyavan jiva, guru Kṛṣṇa pRasade paya Bhakṭi-laṭā bija." - (C.C)

Meaning -"Per chance a rare devotee in the universe may gain the seed of the creeper of Bhakţi by the mercy of Guru and Kṛṣṇa."

The mercy of Guru and Kṛṣṇa are miraculous and spiritual. That is why the characteristics of Bhakṭi are devoid of worldly faults.

Hence it is proved that it is not absolutely essential for devotees to study Divine literature in order to relish Bhakṭi-Rasa.

The biographies of some devotees further prove the above statement. Prahlada, Dhruva, Ambarisa, Haridasa Thakura etc. have been immersed in the ocean of Bhakti-Rasa without any help from Divine literature.

However, for the ones who have interest in literature, it is favorable to relish Bhakţi-Rasa and gain the permanent mood of Divine love by discussing Divine literature. For them, this process is especially helpful. Although to relish Divine Rasa, the study of Divine literature is not absolutely essential, it is one of the best methods, no doubt! For those who have an inborn interest in literature, this method is especially favorable. Śrī Rupa Goswāmi has himself written—

"nave raţyānkure jāṭe haribhakṭasya kaśycit, vibhātvādi heṭuṭvam kinciṭ ṭaṭ kāvyanātyayoh!" - (B.R.S. 2.5.96)

Meaning - "For a devotee who is interested in Rasa-literature, it is little bit necessary to study Divine literature in order to develop his devotion further." Here Srila Goswamipad must have used the words 'little bit' definitely with some special intention. Śrīla Viśvanatha Ćakravarti has explained the above verse. From his explanation we learn that, our main intention should not be only to discuss the fine points of literature as the people interested in worldly Rasa do, but our aim should be to develop passion for Krsna. Hence the use of the words 'little bit'. Otherwise, for those who are interested in poetry and literature since childhood, we feel that their newly sprouted devotion can develop into the dominant mood of love by studying Divine literature seriously. The main aim of the path of Bhakti is to gain the permanent mood of Divine love. This can also be gained by congregational chanting of the Holy Name, worshipping, meditating etc. But for the one who is interested in literature, study and relish of Divine literature is a sure shot method to gain the permanent mood of Divine love.

Let us understand this point further with the help of an example. Suppose some devotee has a friendly inclination towards Lord Krṣṇa. If he wants to turn this inclination into real perrmanent friendly mood, he is advised to think of those qualities of Kṛṣṇa that are favorable for friendly mood. He should regularly chant those names of Kṛṣṇa that are dear to His friends, he should constantly meditate on the mood of Kṛṣṇa's friends and he himself should also be in the same mood. The devotee has obtained the correct advice and starts making attempts in that direction. This devotional practise is called RAGANUGA PRACTISE of friendly mood. Srila Rupa Gosvami has described the path of Raganuga bhajan—

"kṛṣṇaṃ smaraṇ janancasya presthaṇ nijasamihitaṃ, ṭaṭṭaṭ kaṭhā niļuscasau kuryaḍvasam vraje saḍā." – (B.R.S. 1.2.294)

Meaning – "The Raganuga devotee should constantly meditate on dearest Nandanandana (Kṛṣṇa) and His dear associates who have a similar mood for Kṛṣṇa and thus always live in Vraja."

Now we would like to ask our appreciative readers that would it not be more favorable and easy to practise this devotional path with the help of Divine literature, which inspire his friendly mood? Surely it will. When a devotee practises Raganuga path, he should not only be in a friendly mood, but also a serve a particular friend of Krsna. The intense greed to offer such service will arise only when one hears the pastimes of the Lord in friendly mood.

"(u(lat bhāvādi mādhurye śrute dhīryādapeksate, nātra śastram na vuk(iñca tallobhotpattilaksanam."

Meaning – "When one hears the sweet pastimes of Kṛṣṇa with Vṛṇjavasis as described in Śrīmaḍ Bhāgavaṭam and by other rasika devotees, one develops the desire to gain the same sweet bhāva, oblivious of scriptural instructions. This the symptom of the arousal of greed."

'Hearing' does not mean only entry through the ears. Srila Jiva Goswami defines 'hearing' as –

"Śravaṇādi dvāra kathancit anubhuti labhah"

Meaning - "Hearing should amount to realization to a certain extent."

This is because if a subject does not enter the heart, it cannot be called 'hearing'. Such type of hearing gives birth to the abovementioned "greed". When one hears and discusses Divine literature, such greed is born.

Discussion of Divine literature is necessary. The Brahmin - reader of The Gita, proves this.

"yāvaṭ padi ṭāvaṭ pāi tānhāra ḍarśana, ei ālgi the Gīṭāpāth nā chāre mora mana."

Meaning - "As long as I read the Gita, I can behold him. Hence I cannot divert my mind from reading the Gita."

Without reading The Gitā also it is possible to behold the Lord in one's mind's eye by meditation etc. It is also true that the Lord is not inspired in the hearts of many who read the Gitā daily. But the form of the Lord did appear whenever this Brahmin read The Gitā. Had the form appeared when he was not reading The Gitā, he would not have said – "Hence I cannot divert my mind from reading The Gitā." By this we feel that the form did not appear when he was not reading The Gitā. This happened because of some special interest or inborn quality of the Brahmin. In the same way, when devotees who are interested in Divine literature hear or discuss the pastimes, they appear in their hearts. Hence they too cannot give up hearing and it becomes the main part of their $s\bar{a}dhan\bar{a}$. Rasa-science says –

'vibhāvāḍi jīviṭāh"

Meaning - "You will relish Rasa only as long as you are in touch with the literary piece,"

You will notice that you do not relish Rasa so much when you are no more in contact with that particular book. Hence for such devotees, discussion of Divine literature is especially helpful and it should not be underestimated.

THE STEPS TO CONVERT THE DESIRE FOR BHAKTI INTO PERMANENT LOVE FOR KRSNA

We have mentioned that rarely does a fortunate person gain the desire for Bhakṭi. The Gaudiya Vaiṣṇava masters have very expertly described the steps in which this desire for Bhakṭi gets converted into permanent mood of love. First of all this desire is born due to the association and mercy of the devotees.

"KṛṣṇaBhakṭi janmamūla haya sādhusanga." And "Mahaṭkṛpā binā kono karme Bhakṭi noy." -(C.C)

Meaning - "Kṛṣṇa-Bhakṭi is born due to associating with pure devotees" and "there is no way to gain Bhakṭi other than the mercy of pure devotees."

ŚRĪ JĪVA HAS DESCRIBED THE STEPS TO DEVELOP BHAKTI

Later on, this desire for Bhakţi inspires the devotee to know and hear more about God. He feels like going to the place where he can get to hear such Divine pastimes. He asks questions from advanced devotees to learn more about God-related topics. Śrī Jīva Goswāmi has termed such advanced devotees as 'śravaṇ-guru'(a teacher from whom we may hear) and the desire of the devotee has been termed as 'primary interest'. From the 'śravaŋ-guru' the devotee should hear in detail about Bhakṭi and Bhagavān, the aim of life and how to achieve it. Then he should think deeply about it. Due to this when the devotee begins to believe firmly in God, Bhakṭi, and the scriptures dealing in Bhakṭi, it is called 'scriptural belief.' Jīva Goswāmi has recorded the above facts in the following manner –

'tatra prathamam tavat atttat sangajjatena tattat sraddhā tattat paramparā kathā rući ādīnā jāta bhāgavat sammukhasya tattat anusangenaiva tattat bhajaniye bhagavadāvirbhāvavisese tadbhajanamargavisese ća rućirjāyate. Tatatsća visesa vubhut sayam satyam teskato nekatova Srī gurutvenasritat sravanam kriyaet. Taccopakramopasamhārādibhih arthavādhāranam. Punasća sambhāvanā viparīta bhāvanā visesavata svayam tad vicārarūpam mānanāmapi kriyate. Tato bhāgavatah sarvāsmin eva āvirbhāve tathā vidhosau sadā sarvatra virājata ityevatrūpā sraddhā jāyate"

- (Bhaktisandharbha 202 ch)

This is how judgmental people gain belief. But the process is different for those who have natural interest in God. For them Jīva Goswāmi says –

"Rući pradhānānţu na tādṛg-vicarapeksā jāyaṭe, kinṭu sādhusangalilākaṭhā-śravaṇarući-śraddhā śravaṇādyāvrṭṭirūpā evasau maragh.....prīti laksaṇa Bhakṭi icchunānṭu rucipRadhāna eva margah śreyan najāṭarucināmivavicarapRadhānah." –(Bhakṭisandarbha 202 ch)

Meaning – "Those who have natural interest in God , for them devotional practise should comprise of association with pure devotees, interest in hearing, belief in scriptures and God, pondering on the texts one has heard and repeatedly hear with more and more concentration."

According to $S\vec{n}$ Jiva Goswāmi, faith is of two types – worldly, or external faith and scriptural faith. Suppose someone is born in a Vaisnava family. His parents may be extolling the greatness of Bhakti. He may adorn the Tulasi-necklace and tilaka. He may carry on some devotional practise just because he is supposed to. This sort of faith that is seen in childhood due to disciplinary teachings given parents and elders is called 'worldly' or 'external' faith. In many of these cases, it is seen that such children on gaining college-education start opposing Vaisnava beliefs. On the other hand, if one hears from a 'sravana-guru' and gets rid of his doubts by asking questions, he gains 'scriptural faith' which is the true process of Bhajan. In this way his life of Bhakti begins.

THE SYMPTOMS OF SCRIPTURAL FAITH

Śrī Jīva Goswāmi has written -

"Jāṭayām śraḍḍhāyāṃ siḍḍhavasiḍḍahu ca swarṇasiḍḍhilipsoriva saḍāṭaāḍnuvṛṭṭi ceṣṭaiva syāṭ." – (Bahkṭisanḍarbha 175 ch)

Meaning – "A devotee who has scriptural faith continues to practise devotion before and after attaining his goal just like a gold-crazy thief."

If the 'sravan-guru' is qualified to give initiation, then the devotee should take initiation and start devotional practise under his guidance.

ŚARANĀGAŢI' OR SELF-SURRENDER

Śri Jiva Goswami says –

"Ațha vaidha bhedah saraṇāpatți Śrī guravdi ast seva " (Bhakțisandarbha)

Meaning – "The first step in vidhi-Bhakţi is 'saranagaţi'. One has to begin devotional practise only after total surrender to God. Śaranagaţi is the life and soul of devotional practise. If a devotee does not have a very strong mood of śaranagaţi, he will never be able to progress towards the Lotus feet of God. The result of devotional practise depends on how much the devotee has surrendered himself. Forsaking all other means a devotee surrenders unto the Lotus Feet because he afraid of turning away from God due to various worldly temptations as well as the six enemies (lust, greed, envy, anger, illusion and false ego).

"Āśrayāntarasyābhāva kathanena, nāti prgañyā kathanciadśritasyanyasya tyajanena ća "--(Bhaktisandarbha)

Meaning - "There are two ways to tell whether we are self-surrendered or not -

- (1) when we are unaware of any secure place other than the Lotus Feet of the Lord
- (2) due to less intelligence, one may feel there is some secure place; but he forsakes it and takes shelter only at the Lotus Feet of the Lord.

With the help of Vaisnava scriptures, the Goswamis have thus described the characteristics of 'saranagati' -

"Anukulasya samkalpah pratikulyavivarjanam, arksyatiti visvaso goptrtve varanamattha, atmaniksepa karpanye sadvidha saranagatih."

Meaning -

- (1) To do only what is favorable to devotional practise
- (2) To firmly avoid all that is contrary devotional practise
- (3) To have firm faith that the Lord will protect me from all that is unfavorable to devotional practise
- (4) To accept Him as husband or protector (according to the Goswamis this is the main characteristic)
- (5) To get rid of all false ego, surrender one's body and bodily possessions unto the Lord and lead one's life in subjugation to the Lord

(6) To cry out - "O my Lord! Please do protect me."

The result of devotional practise is directly proportional to the amount of wealth one possesses and that wealth is called 'saraṇāgaṭi'. Even the one who is incapable of hearing and chanting can become spiritually successful just by having saraṇāgaṭi.

"Saran laiya kare kṛṣṇe atmasamarpan, Kṛṣṇa tāre taṭkāle karen atmasama."

Meaning - "If a devotee self-surrenders unto Krsna, He immediately accepts him as His own."

SERVICE UNTO THE SPIRITUAL MASTER AND VAISNAVAS

Śaraṇāgaṭi is followed by service unto the Spiritual Master and Vaisnavas. These are the two rivers of mercy flowing from Śrī Bhagavān. Hence all those who wish to be the honored recipients of Divine Bhakṭi-Rasa, they must worship Guru and Vaiṣṇavas who are the very embodiments of God's mercy. Nāraḍa Pañcaraṭra says –

"Vaiṣṇavānaṃ parā Bhakṭih ācāryānāṃ viśeṣaṭah."

Meaning – "One should have supreme devotion towards Vaiṣṇavas, especially for the Spiritual Master." Service unto Guru and Vaiṣṇavas is favorable for devotional service. Hence it is part of Divine Bhakṭi. All scriptures say that our relation with God becomes stronger when we serve the all-purifying Guru and Vaiṣṇavas. One cannot realize the greatness of devotional practise without serving Guru and Vaiṣṇavas. Sri Jiva Goswāmi has further explained the words 'especially for the Spiritual Master' as mentioned in Narada Pancaratra -

"Taţra yadyāpi saraṇāpaṭṭyaiva sarvaṃ siḍḍhaṭi, ṭaṭhāpi vaisiṣṭyalipsuh saktasceṭ ṭaṭah bhāgaavṭ sāsṭropaḍeṣṭṛṇāṃ bhāgavaṭ manṭropaḍeṣṭṛṇāṃ va Śri guru caraṇānāṃ niṭyameva viseṣaṭah seavṃ kuryāṭ. ṬaṭpRasāḍo hi sawswāṇāṇāparṭikārāḍuṣṭyajanārṭhaahnau paramabhāgavaṭ pRasāḍasiḍḍhau ca mūlaṃ." –(B.S)

Meaning – "Although one attains success by saranagati alone, the one who desires to gain Divine Bhakti-Rasa should especially serve the instructor of the scriptures (called SIKSA-GURU) or Spiritual Master always, according to his capacity. This is because when Sri Gurudev is pleased one can easily get Bhagavān's mercy and all inauspicious qualities can be destroyed which is impossible by any other means. Service is of two types – direct and indirect.

THE PREFACE TO WORSHIPING

The preface to worshiping consists of initiation, śaraṇāgaṭi and service unto Guru and Vaiṣṇavas. Śaraṇāgaṭi and service unto Guru and Vaiṣṇavas cleanse the heart. It is difficult to perform devotion attentively if the heart is not clean. Hence to carry on Bluajan one has to resort to śaraṇāgaṭi, service unto Guru-Vaiṣṇavas etc.

In Vṛṇḍāvan too we often see that when a person comes with some respect, enthusiasm or interest and asks for initiation and instructions, he is immediately initiated and made to start with his Bhajan. No one cares to find out whether he has served Guru and Vaiṣṇavas, or whether he has scriptural faith and śaraṇāgaṭi. These are all primary stages of Bhajan. Such neophyte devotee may feel the necessity for these qualities if he associates with great Vaiṣṇavas. But he may not be given such a chance either. If he has scriptural faith he will himself attempt to progress in the devotional path. When one has śaranagati he will definitely attain spiritual success.

THREE TYPES OF BHAKTI - AROPASIDDHA, SANGASIDDHA, SVARŪPASIDDHA

Bhakţi is ordinarily of three types -

- (1) aropasiddha Bhakți in order to fulfil desires
- (2) sangasiddha Bhakti acquired due to association with pure devotees
- (3) svarupasiddha natural, inborn Bhakți

"Aropasiddhā svato Bhakṭiṭvabhāve'pi bhagavad arpaṇādinā Bhakṭiṭavṃ prāpṭa karmādirūpā." – (B.S. 217)

Meaning – "This sort of Bhakţi is not natural. One offers one's karma to Kṛṣṇa in order to fulfil some material desires. It is called aropasiddha Bhakṭi."

"sanagasiddhā svato Bhakṭibhāve'pi ṭaṭ parikaraṭayā saṃsṭhāpanena labdhā ṭaḍanṭahpaṭa gnyānakarma ṭaḍangarūpā " – (B.S)

Meaning – "Sangasiddha Bhakti is not inherent. Due to hearing and chanting one starts acquiring knowledge and performing actions that help devotional activities. Such devotion is termed as 'devotion acquired by association' with saints and other great devotees."

"Svarūpasiddha ća agnadināpi tat prādurbhāve Bhakṭiṭiva vyābhícāri sāksāt ṭadānugaṭyaṭmā ṭaḍīya śravaaṇ-kīrṭanādirūpā" – (B.R.S)

Meaning- "Svarupa siddha (inborn) Bhakti is one which is naturally present in someone although this person may not have any knowledge whatsoever in this subject. He performs unadulterated hearing and chanting, not because he is supposed to, but as a natural expression of his Bhakti. His devotion is unalloyed, he leads a life that is totally favorable for devotional service and he hears and chants constantly."

In the Gaudiya Vaiṣṇava sect, this inborn Bhakṭi is respected. It is again classified into two types –

- (1) Sakaitava It is devotion, which is practised with desire other than pleasing Kṛṣṇa (such as monetary gain, fame, status etc.) It is called 'ignorant' if it is performed with false ego and 'passionate' if performed with envy and 'good' if performed in order to obtain liberation (Mukti). Bhakṭi in reality is without any material quality. But it has been thus classified only because of the devotee's heartfelt tendencies.
- (2) Akaitava It is devotional service performed only to express love for Kṛṣṇa and experience His sweetness. This akaitava inborn Bhakṭi is said to be devoid of material qualities. Srī Jīva Goswami has explained akaitava Bhakṭi with a verse from Śrīmad Bhagavaṭam –

"Madguņaśruţimāṭreṇa mayi sarvaguhāśaye, āmnogaṭiravićchinaanyaṭhā gangāmbhaso'budhau. Lakśaṇaṃ Bhakṭiyogasya nirguṇasya hi udāhṛṭāṃ, ahaiṭuki avyavahiṭā ya Bhakṭi puruṣoṭṭame."

- (Bhag. 3.29.11-12)

Meaning – (Bhagavān Kapila Deva told Mother Devahuţi) – "O mother! Upon hearing My glories when a devotee's heart rushes towards Me, The Supreme Personality, just as River Ganga rushes towards the sea, it is called 'nirguna Bhakti' or Bhakti devoid ofmaterial qualities. It does not desire any fruit and is not adulterated by knowledge, karma etc." This is true Bhakti.

Śrī Jīva Goswāmi has written in Bhakţi sandarbha that Bhakţi is most supremely rare and most supremely incomprehensible. Most of us carry on Bhakţi to some extent and may be it is natural. But most often it is Sakaiṭava. Love for love's sake is very rare. In some corner of the devotee's heart there is a desire for wealth, child, good health or monetary gain, fame and status. Hence, in spite of devotional practise one is unable to obtain Divine Love.

"Bhukṭi mukti āḍi vanchā mane yaḍi ray, sāḍhanā korileo Prem uṭpanna nā hoy."

- (C.C Madhya.19.)

Meaning – "If the heart has desires such as luxury, liberation, etc., in spite of devotional practise one is unable to obtain Divine Love."

Although the desires for luxury and liberation as also obstacles such as lust and anger may disappear, the greed for monetary gain, fame and worship cannot be overcome easily. "I will be revered everywhere, everyone will fall at my feet, I will become famous as a learned, respectable great devotee. I will be the best in all activities and lord over everyone." This tendency of the heart is called 'desire for fame'. It creeps in silently in the heart of a devotee and like quick sand swallows the boat of devotion. In Sri Caitanya Caritamrta, these desires have been termed as subbranches of the Bhakṭi-creeper. On getting the water of Śravan-kīrṭan (hearing and chanting), these sub-branches grow stronger, while the main stem of Bhakṭi abruptly stops growing.

"prațhamei, upaśākhār akribe chedan, atbe mulaśākhā bādi jāy vṛṇḍāvana." — (c . C .)

Meaning – "First of all you should cut the sub-branches. Then alone the main stem grows and enters Vṛnḍāvana."

If these desires for profit, worship and fame had not existed, then in the Gaudiya Vaiṣṇava sect, wherein the most loving Lord Gaursundar has descended, would Divine Love be so rare?

Whatever it may be, Śripāḍ Viśvanāṭha Ćakarvarṭi has made a very beautiful and fine point that we should bear in mind before starting disciplined Bhajan. This point is – 'enthusiasm in Bhajan with due respect.' Not only is Bhajan necessary, but it should be done with enthusiasm.

"satāmkṛpā mahatseva śraddhā gurupādāśrayah bhaajnesu spṛhā Bhakṭiranarṭhapagamasṭaāṭh."

Meaning – "We should serve the pure devotees and gain their mercy. Thereafter we should take the shelter of the Lotus-Feet of the Spiritual Master with faith and start our Bhajan with enthusiasm. Then all our inauspicious qualities will disappear."

In spite of doing Bhajan, if we do not make advancement, we should realize that we are not showing enough enthusiasm. Śri Jiva Goswami has also stated this indirectly. We should have scriptural faith and 'saranagati'. Then we should begin our devotional life by respectfully serving Guru and Vaisnavas. Our Bhajan should be of the akaitava inborn type. While explaining verse number 1.2.36 of B.R.S, Sri Jiva Goswami ahs mentioned how true Bhajan should be performed. It is very much similar to Sri Viśvanātha Cakravarti's 'Bhajan with enthusiasm'. We should perform Bhajan by staying close to Our Worshipable One (Istadev). Without this we cannot be enthusiastic about Bhajan. Upāsanā (worshiping) literally means 'to stay close'. If we do not perform Bhajan like this, passionate love for Kṛṣṇa is very difficult to achieve. As soon as our appreciative readers hear the verse uttered by Lord Kapila in Srimad Bhagavatam and quoted by Śri Jiva Goswami, they will comprehend why Bhakti has been termed 'most supremely incomprehensible'.

ŚRĪLA VIŚVANĀŢHA ON THE DEVELOPMENT OF BHAKŢI

When one gains scriptural faith, one will naturally start devotional practise. Then again when akaitava inborn Bhakti appears, one's heart will rush towards the Lord like River Ganga does towards the sea. This frame of mind occurs only in special cases. Suppose a devotee has inborn Bhakti, but has material desires. This is the first stage called 'undecided'. Śrīla Viśvanātha has stated in his book 'Mādhurya Kādambini' that such a devotee, in the next stage, gets rid of tendencies for material desires, starts performing disciplined Bhajan and cuts the sub-branches comprising of profit, fame etc. this stage is called 'decided' or 'stable'. At this stage the devotee gets rid of minute anarthas viz. Laya, vikṣep, kaṣāya, apraṭipaṭṭi and Rasāsvāḍa.

Laya - one feels more and more sleepy during chanting, hearing and meditating (in this order).

Viksep - discussing or remembering material topics while chanting or hearing is called viksep.

Apratipatti - Suppose there is no laya or viksep. In spite of this our chanting and hearing is not proper. Then this is called apratipatti.

Kasaya - When we show signs of anger, greed etc. while hearing and chanting.

Rasasvad - It is deep engrossment in material subjects while hearing etc.

When all these obstacles are lacking we are said to have attained 'stability'. This is followed by 'interest'. At this stage the devotee feels no fatigue or boredom in spite of performing lots of Bhujan all day and night. Then the devotee is promoted to the stage of 'addiction'. Śri Jīva has said –

"rućistu buddhipurvaka, asaktistu svarasiki."

Meaning – "In the stage of 'interest' the devotee performs Bhajan wishfully, voluntarily or consciously. But in the stage of 'addiction', devotional service becomes involuntary action or spontaneous. 'Addiction' has been described in Māḍhurya Kāḍambini so beautifully and wonderfully that in spite of reading over and over again, we are left desiring for more. It says, [&]quot;Āsakţirevanţahkaraṇamukuram ţaţhā mārjayaţi aythā ţaţra sahasā praţibimbiţo bhāgavanavalokyamāna iva bhavaţi."

Meaning – "Addiction cleanses the devotee's mirror-like heart to such an extent that on suddenly seeing the Lord's reflection in it, one would mistake it to be the Lord Himself." But even this stage is not considered to be 'uninterrupted'. After this comes the stage of Divine Passion. Now the devotee's heart loses all material desires and becomes spiritual. In this stage the devotee never forgets Kṛṣṇa, whether he is awake, asleep or semi-conscious. This stage is called 'uninterrupted Bhakṭi'. Sri Jiva Goswami ahs called this 'uninterrupted Bhakṭi' as 'dhruvanusmṛṭi'. Upaniṣaḍ says –

"Sattva śuddhau dhruvanusmṛṭi smṛṭilambhe sarvagranṭhinam vipramoksah".

Meaning - "The purification of consciousness results in constant remembrance of God. After acquiring constant remembrance (dhruāvnusmṛṭi), all material bondage is cut free."

When inborn Bhakṭi is practised repeatedly, one crosses the stage of addiction. This is called akaiṭava inborn Bhakṭi. It is not only supremely rare but also supremely incomprehensible.

Uninterrupted flow of the heart is called 'permanent mood'. In Bhakţi literature, Divine passion is said to be the 'permanent mood'. We have seen how this permanent mood can be achieved. From this, the reader has surely concluded that it is not very easy. Sri Jīva says that, at first we should hear and chant the Holy Name, followed by hearing about Kṛṣṇa's form and qualities, and last of all, His pastimes. When the heart is quite cleansed we should hear and meditate on the Divine form. This makes the heart more clear.

"Kṛṣṇa sphure ṭāra man haiyacche nirmal" - (C.C.)

Hearing about the qualities of Kṛṣṇa makes the heart even cleaner. Ordinarily it is seen that the qualities attract and impress the heart even more than the form. Often the heart melts when one hears of the Lord's qualities such as parental affection towards the devotees. When the heart melts, it becomes more clear and soft.

"Bhakṭirhi bhakṭa (ćiṭṭa) kotī praviṣta ṭaḍārḍri bhavayiṭṛṭāćchāṭiviśeṣa iṭi." - (B.S.180)

Meaning - "Bhakṭi is that special power of Śri Bhagavān that entrs the devotee's heart and melts it."

Ordinarily, the heart of a living entity is hard like lac and devoid of any sweetness or 'Rasa'. When Bhakṭi appears, the heart melts, becomes clean, soft and Rasa-filled. Then by devotional practise Divine passion can be attained. On the appearance of permanent mood, one has the desire to behold the Lord, serve Him and establish an intimate relationship with Him.

INITIAL SUCCESS IN DEVOTIONAL PRACTISE

When a devotee attains the permanent mood, he feels grateful and blessed. The permanent mood gives rise to Divine inspirations constantly. This is the initial success in devotional practise. Hence Srī Jīva has written –

"Siḍḍhisćāṭranṭahkaraṇakāmāḍiḍoṣa kśayakārī paramānunḍa parākāṣthāgāmi Śrī hari sphuraṇa rūpaiva jñeya."

- (B.S.)

Meaning – "The success of devotional practise is constant Divine Inspiration in the heart due to which all inauspicious qualities such as lust etc. are driven away and one reaches the zenith of supreme bliss."

When the devotee attains permanent mood, he can relish Divine Rusa without any hindrance. Then he does not face any obstacle or interruption in relishing Rasa. Sometimes he gets overjoyed and lost in Divine inspiration and at other times, he feels sad and depressed by the lack of it. Sometimes he cries and sometimes he laughs. Sometimes he sings and dances in joy. In this way he relishes Rasa unobstructedly.

The following pathway results in unlimited bliss-

The association of a proper Guru \rightarrow Hearing \rightarrow Pondering \rightarrow Scriptural Faith \rightarrow Taking initiation and instructions \rightarrow $\acute{S}ar\bar{a}n\bar{a}gati$ \rightarrow Serving Guru and Vaisnavas \rightarrow Enthusiasm in Bhajan \rightarrow Akaitava devotional practise \rightarrow interest in Bhajan \rightarrow Addiction to the Lord \rightarrow UNLIMITED BLISS.

This may be gained with or without the study of Divine literature.

HOW THE STUDY OF DIVINE LITERATURE CAN HELP IN CREATING PERMANENT MOOD

Now let us study how the desire for devotion can be converted into permanent mood by the study of Divine literature. Those who practise devotion in Nabadwipa or Vrndavana often get the chance of hearing Divine literature. Getting to see dramas based on the same is quite rare though. But most devotees get to relish Divine literature by reading it alone. There are many devotees who silently shed tears on reading and relishing Rasa-filled literature in some lonely spot. Sometimes they do smile softly while reading. Of course, if they were to hear from a capable person, they would have relished more. $S\bar{n}$ Jīva says –

"savāsana mahānubliāva mukhāt śravanāntu parama bhāgyāt eva sampādyate"

- (B.S.)

Meaning – "Only the most fortunate ones get to hear about Kṛṣṇa from a devotee having similar taste."

If the reader and the audience possess similar devotional desires, then one can relish Bhakṭi-Rasa in a better manner. The science of Bhakṭi-Rasa concludes that when Bhakṭi is performed by taking the shelter of a devotee, it turns into passion and gets filled with Rasa.

Hence the speaker of Divine literature is the object of devotion for the devotees in the audience. Bhakṭi-Rasa is generated quickly in the devotee by seeing, touching and associating with him. Sri Rupa Goswami has said –

"sajāṭiyāṣaye snigḍhe sāḍhau sangah svaṭovare, śrimaḍ bhāgavaṭ arṭhānāmāsvādo rasukaih sah."

Meaning - "We must relish the Rasa of Śrīmad Bhāgavaṭam in the association of devotees more advanced than ourselves and in the company of rasikas, all of whom must have similar devotional moods."

We have mentioned that the actors performing in worldly dramatics do not relish Rasa since they are ridden with fallacies. But great literatures have such power that the audience relishes a Rasa comparable to relishing the Brahman when they watch dramas based on the same. However, transcendental Rasa-literature is without any fallacy. It is an embodiment of spiritual Rasa.

"Pivaṭa bhāgavaṭaṃ Rasāmalayaṃ muhūraho rasukāh bhūvi bhāvukāh" -(Bhāgavatam. 1.1.13)

Meaning - "My dear rasika devotees! Please drink the nectarine Rasa of Śrimad Bhāgavaṭam repetitively."

In the very beginning of Śrīmad Bhāgavaṭam, Lord Vyāsadeva is inviting rasika devotees to relish the Divine scripture, which is like a Rasa-filled fruit of the wish-fulfilling tree of the Vedas. You may say that the word 'rasika' is used in the material sense as well. Hence, how can we say that Vyasadev is referring to devotee-rasikas only? To alleviate this doubt he uses the word 'bhāvukāh'. 'Bhāvukā' refers to those people alone who have rejected mundane temporary worldly Rasas and are in search of permanent eternal Divine Rasa. Only they are qualified to relish the sweet Rasa-filled fruit of Śrimad Bhagavatam.

Śri Narada's story is a brilliant example of how one may gain the permanent mood of love by hearing Rasa-filled Kṛṣṇa-kaṭḥā.

"tatranvaahm kṛṣṇakaṭhā pragayaaṭm anugraheṇaśṛṇavam manoharah, tah śraḍḍhāya me'nupaḍam viśṛṇvaṭah priyaśravasyaṇga amambhaḍraṭih." - (Bhag.1.5.26.)

Meaning – (Śri Nāraḍa told Vyāsa) – "O Vyāsa! I sat at the feet of those most superior devotees who constantly glorified the Supreme Lord Śri Hari and heard about the sweet Lord Govinḍa. Due to this I gained passion for Lord Govinḍa whose pastimes are most attractive."

Sage Nārada was the son of a maidservant in his previous birth. His mother served in the house of a Brahmin. Once during the four months of monsoon, some sages came to live in the house. As per the Brahmin's orders the five-year-old child started serving the guests. They used to constantly glorify Lord Krsna. By their mercy the child gained 'passion' (permanent mood) in the tender age itself.

HEARING KRSNA-KATHĀ RESULTS IN FAITH, ADDICTION AND PASSION

In the very beginning of Śrimad Bhāgavaṭam, Sage Sūta has described how hearing Kṛṣṇa-kaṭhā results in cleansing the heart, gaining faith, addiction and finally passion.

"Śrnvaṭām svakaṭhāh kṛṣṇah punyaśravaaṇkīrṭanah, hṛḍyantahṣṭho hi abhaḍrāni viḍhūnoṭi suhṛṣatām. Naṣtaprasu abhaḍreṣu niṭyam bhāgavaṭa sevayā, bhagavaṭi uṭṭama śloke Bhaktirbhavaṭi naiṣthikī. Ṭaḍā rajasṭamobhavah kāmalobhāḍayasća se. Evam pRasannomanaso bhāgavaṭBhakṭiyogaṭāh, bhagaavṭṭatṭvavijnanām mukṭasangasya jāyaṭe." – (Bhag.1.2.17-20.)

Meaning – "Hearing and glorifying Lord Kṛṣṇa is auspicious. Lord Kṛṣṇa who is the well wisher of His devotees enters the heart of the one who hears about Him and destroys dirty desires, lust etc. In this manner when one repeatedly hears from a devotee, he gains firm faith in Govinda whose activities are All-pure. Henceforth his heart is no more disturbed by lust, greed etc. that are born of the modes of passion and ignorance. Instead he enters the mode of goodness and becomes joyful. In this way the joyous devotee realizes God."

Śrīla Viśvanātha has explained the words 'evam prasanno manaso' in the following manner -

"prasannomanasah utpannaraterityarthah, ratyavina sarvatha visayasamsparsasyanupattestena vina ća manah prsadasambhavaditi."

Meaning - "The word 'prasannamanasah' refers to the inborn passion for the Lord, because if devotional passion is not inborn, it will not be devoid of material qualities, and hence the heart will not be joyous."

Śri Śukadeva's last and final advice in Bhagavaṭam is -

"Bhagavatah līlā-kaṭhā Rasa niṣevanam." - (Bhag.12.8.80)

Meaning - "One should constantly relish the Rusa of the Divine pastimes as described in Bhāgavaṭam."

Vyopadeva has written in Muktaphala -

"Vyāsādibhrvarņiṭasya viṣṇorvisṇubhakṭānām va ćariṭasya navaRasāṭmakaṣya śravaṇāḍinajaniṭah ćamaṭkāro BhakṭiRasah."

Meaning -"Bhakṭi-Rasa is the wonderful bliss that is relished by the devotees when they hear about Lord Viṣṇu and His devotees as described by Vyasadeva." Sri Vrhad Bhagavatamrta is a most relishable and wonderful text written by Śrila Sanatana Goswami. In this text he has described the pastimes, Rasa, moods, principles and everything that should be known to Gaudiya Vaisnavas, in the form of a story. He has explained the serious and blissful intentions of Śri Bhagavatam in details. He has himself called it 'the sweetest essence' of Bhagavatam. Let us study a wonderful example from the story of Gopakumara as described in the above text. It tells us how a devotee can gain permanent mood and relish Rasa.

Gopakumara is a twelve or thirteen year old boy of Vraja. He was a cowherd boy. Sometimes the boys saw a very handsome, fair-complexioned Brahmin on the banks of River Yamuna. He was a Kṛṣṇa-devotee. He was middle-aged and did not ask anyone for anything. Gopakumara gained a natural respect for him. Sometimes he offered him milk etc. One day on seeing Gopakumara alone on the banks of the Yamuna, he mercifully initiated him with the ten-lettered Kṛṣṇa-Mantra. He told him that it was the mercy of Kṛṣṇa and by chanting it he would gain everything.

When Gopakumara chanted this Mantra he became free from worldly attachment. His heart was clear, soft and free from offences. He started on a pilgrimage and reached Prayag. There he stayed for few days in one devout King's palace. Then he proceeded to Puri. On beholding Lord Jagannatha, he shed tears and shivered. Later he heard about the heavenly abodes, and desired to go there. Due to the power of the Mantra he reached heaven and became the King of the demi-gods. But he was not satisfied. In search of satisfaction he traveled to higher heavenly abodes such as Maharloka, Tapoloka and Satyaloka. Everywhere in Tapoloka he could sense the presence of the Supreme Brahman. In Satyaloka he gained the position of Brahma. Here we have to mention one unusual fact – he had no attraction for women. The first chapter of the second part of the text is titled 'Detachment'. Gopakumara had heartfelt detachment. On hearing the glories of liberation, he practised austerities and gradually attained liberation. Then he got rid of all desires. In Vaikuntha he heard about pure devotion and devotional practise from the associates of the Lord.

"Alpa kari nā māniha Kṛṣṇa-dāsa nāma, alpa bhāgye dāsa nāhi kare Bhagavān. Āge haya mukta tabe sarva bandha-nāsa, tabe sei haite pāre Śri Kṛṣṇa-dāsa." - (Caitanya-Bhagavat)

Meaning – "Do not underestimate the position of a servant of Kṛṣṇa. It is not a small thing to be considered a servant by the Supreme Lord. Only a very fortunate person can beget such a position. First he becomes liberated and free from worldly attachment. Then he becomes the servant of Lord Kṛṣṇa."

It is hypocrisy to desire liberation. Gopakumara's Bhakti till this stage can be called 'fruitive inborn Bhakti' (sakaiṭava). It was not akaiṭava or pure. After liberation, the process of pure devotion started. Now he chanted with a heart as pure and clean as Gangāwater. In a very short while, he gained addiction, passion and love for the Lord. We must remember that he had love for the Lord, but this was not the kind of love we find in Vraja. Afterwards he got to behold Lord Nārāyaṇa. In Vaikuntha he met Sage Nāraḍa.

First of all, he was born in Vraja. Over and above he gained the mercy of a true Spiritual Master. Chanting the ten-lettered Mantra granted him the power to travel to Ayodhya and behold Lord Rghunātha (who is an incarnation of Lord Kṛṣṇa). Then he went to Dwarakā and met the Lord of Dwarakā. But he was still dissatisfied. Some unknown realm of Divine relish attracted his heart. By now he had a feeling that his Worshipable Deity Lord Madana Gopāla wants to accept him as his soul mate. He had also experienced the embrace and kisses of the Lord in a revelation. We feel he had experienced Lord Śyāmasundara playing the flute with both hands. This is the reason why even the sweetness of Śri Dwarakānātha could not satisfy him. Just as earlier he had a desire for liberation, until now he thought his Worshipable Deity to be opulent. He learnt the path to obtain Divine love from the associates in Vaikuntha. From Sage Nāraḍa in Dwārakā, he learnt how to attain Vraja. There in Uḍḍhava's house, Nāraḍa advised him thus –

- (1) He has to consider Lord Kṛṣṇa as his true friend in the practical sense.
- (2) He has to give up fear, awe, shyness, disbelief etc.
- (3) He has to meditate on and glorify the pastimes of Vraja.
- (4) He has to make his devotional practise brilliant by chanting the Holy Name which is Supreme.
- (5) He should carry on devotional practise in Vṛnḍāvana.

The essence of Narada's teaching is that, if one does not consider Lord Kṛṣṇa to be a true friend in the practical sense and does not become a servant of the Gopas and Gopis of Vṛṇḍāvana, one will not attain Goloka. Hence one has to execute devotional practise keeping this as the main objective.

Once more from Dwaraka, Gopakumara came to Vraja on planet earth. He practised devotion according to Narada's advice. The means to attain Goloka, one has to live on the earthly Vraja, glorify and meditate on the Divine pastimes of Vraja. Earlier Gopakumar had gained Divine love. Now by considering Lord Kṛṣṇa to be his true friend and following in the footsteps of the Vrajavāsis, in a very short time the Vraja-type of love appeared in him. It is needless to mention that he also gained firmness, interest and addiction.

From the description in $S\overline{n}$ Vrhad Bhāgavatāmṛta we understand that Gopakumāra practised devotion in $R\overline{a}g\overline{a}nuga$ path in a friendly mood.

"Yadrśi bhavana yasya siddhirbhavati tadrśi."

Meaning - "One gains the goal according to one's mood."

Hence by the goal one attains, we may realize the mood of the devotee. Although he did not follow any particular friend, he did follow the friendly mood.

The relisher of Divine sweetness is of two types -

- (1) the realized
- (2) the practising devotee

The practising devotee can be further classified as -

- (a) one who wishes to relish Divine sweetness directly
- (b) one who wishes to relish Divine sweetness under the guidance of expert devotees.

Those who wish to relish Divine sweetness directly want to become like the realized souls. Hence some people like to call their devotion as 'ragatmika'. But this is not correct. It is impossible for a devotee to gain 'ragatmika' Bhakti possessed by the eternal associates of the Lord without being subjugated to them. The sages of Dandakaranya wished to relish Lord Kṛṣṇa like the eternally realized Gopis.

"Bhakṭumaiććhan suvigraham"

-(Padmapurāṇa)

Meaning - "They wanted to relish the beautiful form of the Lord."

But in Bhaktirasamṛta Sindhu these sages have not been termed as 'rūgātmikā' devotees. Instead their devotion has been called 'Rūgānugā'. They consider the Gopis to be their ideals. Hence wittingly or unwittingly, although they were not subservient to any particular Gopi, they served the mood of the Gopis. In the same way, Gopakumara did not serve any particular friend, but he followed the friendly mood. – This is undoubted. Most probably his mood was that of a 'priya narma sakhā'.

in Vrhad Bhagavaṭamṛṭa says that Narada is Madhumangal, a 'priya narma sakhā' in the pastimes of Vṛṇḍāvana. Gopakumara got the desire for Bhakti by the mercy and association of Nāraḍa. Gopakumāra's Spiritual Master too may have been in a friendly mood. In Vaikuntha, Gopakumar had felt a desire to embrace Lord Nārāyaṇa. In the purport to verse number 2.4.76 of the text Śri Sanātana has written –

"Dasksara mantropasanadi svabhavenasya bhavovisesah utpatteh bhaya gaurava hani adikam jatamiti"

Meaning – "Gopakumara gained the permanent mood and got rid of fear and awe by chanting the ten-letter Mantra."

Not only this, But Gopakumara had experienced Lord Kṛṣṇa embracing, kissing and joking with him when he chanted the Mantra meditatively.

Nāraḍa had said that we can not attain Goloka till we accept the Lord as a true friend in the practical sense. This means we have to love the Lord as one loves a true friend. Vraja is a land of total sweetness." There is only opulence from Vaikuntha to Dwārakā. Kṛṣṇa is accepted as God everywhere else, other than in Vraja. Such devotion is called 'vaiḍhi Bhakṭi' (ritualistic devotion). The devotion, which is performed under vaiḍhi Bhakṭi is also, called 'vaiḍhi Bhakṭi'. The devotion in Vaikuntha is also called 'vaiḍhi'. — Hence Nāraḍa had told Gopakumara —

"You have performed Bhajan considering Kṛṣṇa to be God, but if you wish to go to Goloka you have to give up the feelings of awe and accept him practically as a true friend."

Thus we realize that by ritualistic devotion we can advance only upto Dwaraka. To enter Goloka Vrndavana the only way is to practise Rāgānuga Bhakṭi.

"Ragabhaktye Vraje swayam Bhagavan paya, vidhibhaktye parsada dehe vaikunthe jaya." -(C.C. Madhya.24.)

Meaning - "By following the Rāgānugā path one attains God Himself in Vraja, while the one who practise Vaidhi Bhakti attains Vaikuntha by becoming an associate of the Lord."

Deep love is not possible when one is overawed by opulence. Love is lessened by the feelings of reverence, hesitation etc. The devotee and the Divine One floating in the sweet current of love cling on to each other. This makes love so special. There is no feeling of small and big, high and low. Love has dispelled all distance and cast the Divine One who is the subject of love and the devotee, who is the object of love in one mould filled with the Rasa of love. There is no dearth of Rasa in this relation. The Ganga of love has hundreds of tributaries and flows joyously with waves dancing on each other. All *Rasa*s are present in it and all moods are worthwhile. Hence the devotion of the Deity of Vraja is All-attractive.

Sweetness is the essence of Divinity. In Vraja alone this sweetness is expressed. Although in Vraja we do find devotees in servile mood, but the Lord of Vraja is not totally satisfied by this mood. Hence it is said –

"Mora puţra mora sakhā mora pranapaţi, eibhāve jei more kare suḍḍhā Bhakṭi, āpanake baḍa mane āmāke sama hīnu, sarva bhāve hui āmi tāāhra aḍhīna." - (C.C)

Meaning – "The one who performs pure devotion accepting Me as a son, a friend or a dear husband, one who considers oneself to be greater and Myself to be either equal or smaller, is able to make Me subjugated in all respects."

Devotion in servile mood may be without selfish desires, but it is not considered to be as pure as the other three moods. Viz., friendly, parental and conjugal. These three moods are main Rāgānugā Bhakṭi. We obtain Vraja-Rasa completely when we accept Kṛṣṇa as our own and get rid of all feelings of respect and hesitation.

Gopakumara came to Vraja from Spiritual Dwaraka and started practising devotion as taught by Narada. He used to always meditate on Kṛṣṇa accepting Him practically as a friend. He desired to behold Kṛṣṇa. Gradually his heart started melting. At this stage, when an appreciating devotee hears his story, he too slowly starts gaining the same mood. (Of course, this will not happen to each and every reader; hence we have used the word 'appreciating').

According to rhetoricians, when we read good literature, at first, the subject appears in our mind. Although in the story of Gopakumāra, Sri Madana Gopāla is the main subject, for the appreciating devotee readers, Gopakumāra is also a hero. In the book 'Kṛṣṇa Karṇāmṛṭa' Lord Kṛṣṇa is the subject of love for Vilvamangala. Yet, for the appreciating devotees, Vilvamangala too is the subject of love and melts their hearts. Gopakumāra or Vilvamangala are enhancing the mood of the readers. While reading these stories, the reader may not have a permanent mood. But this does not mean that he has no mood at all. He has a mood of devotion that is unstable. When this mood becomes firm, he does not forget Kṛṣṇa whether he is awake, asleep or semiconscious. When he will never lack the love of God, his mood will be called 'permanent'.

We need to discuss more about the characteristic of a subject.

"Vibhavayati utpadayatiti vibhava"

-(A.K)

Meaning - "That which gives rise to feelings is called the subject."

This action of 'giving rise to feelings' refers mainly to the hero and heroine. The subject awakens the inner Bhakṭi in the appreciating reader. Gopakumāra is making latent devotional feelings capable of germinating (like watering a seed). More an appreciating devotee hears or reads the story of Gopakumāra, greater the sprout is nourished. This is the characteristic of a subject.

"Tām nāradīyam anusrtya siksām Srī Kṛṣṇa nāmāni nijapriyāni, saṃkirṭayān susvaram aṭra līlāstasya prāgayyanna nucintayāṃśca. Tadiṭā līlāsthala- jāṭameṭa dvilokāyān vibhāva-dāse gaṭo ye, ṭayoh sva citte kāraṇena lajje kaṭham parasmin kaṭhyanyaham ṭe."

- (Vrhad Bhagavaṭāmṛṭa 2.6.1-2.)

Meaning - (Gopakumāra told Janasarmā the Brahmin) - "() Brahmin! As instructed by Nāraḍa, I started chanting the Holy Name of my dear Kṛṣṇa, singing His pastimes sweetly, and meditating on the same. In this manner I lived in Vṛṇḍāvana. Now I am embarrassed to think of the state I was in when I had visited the places of His pastimes. How can I describe them to you?"

This is the mood of Gopakumāra who chanted, glorified and meditated on his dear Kṛṣṇa. The appreciating reader too is attentively thinking and meditating on the same. The reader will not be able to relish much only by thinking of Gopakumāra's form. Gopakumāra is chanting and meditating with so much love, enthusiasm, interest, faith and addiction – Gopakumāra is so much anxious to behold Kṛṣṇa – He has firm faith that Kṛṣṇa will appear before him – the words of Nāraḍa and Uḍḍhava will never prove to be false – he does not wish to waste even a second.

"Kṛṣṇera sambandha binā kāla nāhi yāya." - (C.C)

Meaning – " We should not spend any time without being connected to Krsna."

"Samuṭkantha haya ćiṭṭe lālasa pRādhanā, Nāmagane saḍā rući laya kṛṣṇa nāma." - (C.C)

Meaning - "We should be very anxious and greedy for the love of Kṛṣṇa. We should chant and glorify the Holy Names of Kṛṣṇa with interest."

-(C.C.)

The devotee will especially relish it when he thinks of Gopakumāra in the above manner. The appreciating reader is thinking – "Ohh! Gopakumāra is indeed fortunate! He has rejected everything else and is searching for Kṛṣṇa in Vṛṇḍāvana! Will I ever have such fortune in any birth?"

The reader is finding the devotional life of Gopakumāra to be so tempting! When the reader is thinking in such a manner, his heart is becoming clean, serene, Rasa-filled and soft. Gopakumara is saying – " I am embarrassed to even think of the state I was in, how can I express it?" In spite of this, much is expressed. Sanāṭana Goswāmi has written in his purport –

"Bhavaśćantahkarana vṛtṭiviśeṣah dasaćonmaṭṭadivadavasṭha."

Meaning - "'MOOD' refers to the tendency of his inner heart and 'STATE' refers to madness."

Gopakumāra's state was like - (as in C.C) -

"What to do, where to go, where will I find Krsna?"

The stages of passion have been well described in Madhurya Kadambini. Gopakumāra is thinking – "Will I ever really get to behold those lotus eyes, that sweet soft smile, That oh-so-serene dark splendor of Kṛṣṇa and the beauty of his golden yellow dress?" When he is thus pondering, that sweet form is somewhat appearing in his mind and he is shedding tears profusely. He is thinking again-"Will I ever get to hear his voice, flute, anklets and ornaments?" Immediately in his mind he is somewhat hearing the sound. At every moment he was in rapture and thinking –

"mṛgamada nīlotpala, milane ye parimala, sei hare tara garva mana."

Meaning - " The fragrance of Krsna is like a mixture of musk and blue-lotus -it is enough to steal anyone's pride and prestige."

He was thinking – "Will I ever get to smell that fragrance?" Immediately, he was getting almost a similar smell and he was thrilled. He was thinking – "Will it be ever possible that Kṛṣṇa will mercifully touch me with His palms that are cooling like a million moons?" Just then he felt a touch almost similar to that and he was drenched in perspiration! 'MOOD' and 'STATE' refer to this sort of a situation that is akin to madness.

Due to devotional practise Gopakumāra gained the permanent mood of love. Then he gradually expressed this mood in the form of dancing, rolling on the earth and so many more activities. So far Gopakumāra's Bhajan was awakening the desire for devotion in the reader's heart, softening it and filling it with Rasa. The reader was feeling like crying. When the reader learns how Gopakumāra expressed tears and rapture on experiencing the form, fragrance etc., he is unable to control his tears. Thinking of the subject and his activity has such effect. This is a psychological secret.

Of course, in order to relish Rasa the reader or audience has to have a bright cultural background. This is not theoretical stuff, but a proven fact. Studying of Divine Literature in this manner refines and chastens the heart of the reader. The crazy-like state of Gopakumāra as described by Śrīla Sanātana is called 'passing mood'. It adds beauty to the permanent mood. Along with craziness he also expressed humility, anxiety, yearning, remorse etc.

When the reader thinks of Gopakumāra's passing moods, he too has similar feelings to a small extent. This adds beauty and diversity to the feelings. Rhetoric says – "The subject arouses the mind, the activities further enhance our feelings and the passing moods add a touch of variety." Srī Rūpa Goswāmi has written –

"ratestu tattāt āsvāda viṣeśa āyāṭi yogyaṭāṃ, vibhāvāṭanṭi kurvaayntityukṭa dhūrairvibhāvakāh. Tāncānubhāvayānṭyanṭaṣṭanvanṭyāsvāda nirbharam, iṭyukṭa anubhāvāṣṭe katākśāḍyah sa sātvikāh. Sancārayanṭi vaiciṭriṃ nāyanṭe ṭām ṭaṭhāviḍhāṃ, ye nirveḍaḍayo bhāvasṭe ṭu sancārino maṭāh."

- (B.R.S. 2.5.87-89)

Meaning - "That which excites the permanent relish of love and causes more relish, is called by the wise ones as 'SUBJECT' (vibhava)."

Gestures such as sidelong glance along with silent expressions (tears etc.) which make the feeling of love more relishing is called 'ACTIVITIES' (anubhāva).

The feelings like remorse which add flavor to the subject and its activities and bring about diversity of moods are termed as 'PASSING' or sancāri."

Now suppose someone participates in a worldly spiritual discussion from morn to eve. In a single day, he studies many subjects, their activities and various passing moods. Will he relish Rasa on that day very day? Abhinava Guptāćārya has written—"He who has clarified his mind by constantly studying literature and has the capability of equalization, can be called 'appreciating' ".

In this very book we have mentioned that according to the scientists of Bhakṭi-Rasa, we may get a permanent mood by having faith, śaraṇāgaṭi, and by serving Guru and Vaiṣṇavas. It takes a long time, and only after we gain permanent mood, we are able to relish Rasa. After the three verses Śrila Rūpa Goswāmi continues "Eṭāṣanṭu taṭhā bhāve bhāgavaṭkāvyānatyayoh, sevāmahūh paraṇi heṭum keciṭ ṭaṭ pakśarāgīnah. Kinṭu ṭaṭra usḍusṭarka māḍhuryāḍbhūṭa sampaḍāh, raṭerāsyah prābhavo'yam bhaveṭ kāraṇamuṭṭamam.

(B.R.S. 2.5.90-91)

Meaning – "Some people staunchly support the idea that it is possible to relish devotional Rasa only by studying and discussing Divine Literature. However, it is the mind-blowing sweet and wonderful Divine passion of a devotee that is most responsible for causing Rasa-relish."

Yet, we apparently feel as if we may obtain Rasa within a very short time by studying literature alone. That is why some people say that the descriptions given in the books are the causes of the reader's moods.

"Alaukikasya ratyadeh samajika-nivasinah, udvodhe karapam jileyam rtayametat samuććitam."

- (BhaktiRasāyan-3rd Ullāsa, 10th verse)

Meaning - "The vibhāvas etc. arouse the feelings of the audience. But the characteristics of anubhāva and sancāri bhāvas are different and more special."

The fact is that we cannot relish Rasa in one day or a very short while. But we are assured of relish in the distant future.

THE GRADUAL DEVELOPMENT OF GOPAKUMARA'S DEVOTIONAL LIFE AND DEVOTIONAL EXPERIENCE

Gopakumara's devotional life progressed in the following manner-

He had gained passion.

"Rați gadha haile dhare prema-nama."

-(C.C)

As a result of devotional practise Gopakumara gradually gained love. In the state of PASSION, the Divine form and qualities appear in the mind and the devotee feels unlimited joy. But as passion develops into love, he is no more satisfied with mental picture of Kṛṣṇa, but he wishes to actually meet Him.

Meaning - "Deep passion is called 'LOVE' ".

APPEARANCE AND SPECIAL APPEARANCE IN THE MIND

In passion we can behold Him only in our mind's eye. But in love we can see Him inside us as well as outside. There is an in between stage also. There is no mention of this in Gopakumāra's parable. But it is mentioned the story of Vilvamangala. He prayed for the form of Kṛṣṇa to appear in his mind right from Guru Somagiri's hermitage upto the boundary of Vraja (refer Śri Kṛṣṇa Karṇāmṛta 4-21). From there onwards he prayed to actually behold Kṛṣṇa till he reached Vṛṇḍāvan (refer verses 23-55). While staying in Śri Vṛṇḍāvan he got a special appearance of Kṛṣṇa in his heart.

"Mauliscandrakabhusano marakata stambhābhih ramam vapuh vaktram citra vimugdha hāsa madhuram vāle vilole drsau, vācah saisavasītala madagajaslāghya vilāsasthitih mandam mandamaye ka esa mathurāvithim mitho gāhate."

- (Krsna Karnamṛta 57)

Meaning - "Who is the one entering slowly into Vṛndāvan? - Whose head is adorned with peacock's feather, body is captivating like an iron pillar, face is endowed with fascinating sweet smiles, soulful eyes are darting side-long glances, whose words are soothing like adolescence and gait is more amorous than that of a passionate elephant."

From the above description we feel as if Vilvamangal is actually seeing Lord Kṛṣṇa, but in reality, he is only having a special inspiration. Maybe Gopakumāra also had a special inspiration like this before he actually met Kṛṣṇa, but there no mention of this in the book. Gopakumara was anxious to behold Kṛṣṇa.

"It is impossible to spend these accursed nights and days without beholding You (Kṛṣṇa)." - (C.C)

His state was the same. He himself has said -

"Sadā mahartya karuṇāsvarairuḍannayami rāṭridivasāmśća katārah, na vedmi yadyāṭ śućiardanusthiāṭm sukhayā va ṭaṭaduṭarṭisanḍhæve."

Meaning – "Dear Brahmin! In Vṛṇḍāvan I used to wail in distress, I had spent many nights and days in devotional practise helplessly, I know not whether for sorrow or joy."

Really, to obtain the love for Madanagopala is a very difficult affair.

"Ratiranande rupaiva."

- (B.R.S.)

Meaning - "Passion is a blissful state."

But, love is the intermingling of nectar and poison. Sometimes we feel limitless joy and at other times we feel limitless sorrow. Gopakumara has said – "At that time whatever I had performed was joyful or sorrowful, I cannot state clearly. I could not understand whether I was inside a forest-fire or in the cool waters of the River Yamuna. Due to over anxiety I used to feel more sorrow than joy. Hence I used to wail in distress night and day.

Sometimes I used to feel some mercy and think that Kṛṣṇa is indeed very merciful. Again, because I could not behold Him directly, I used to think there is some trick in that mercy. Ultimately I forgot what is joy totally."

Now a vital question arises – "If the way to love leads to suchterrible grief, then is it not quite useless to gain it, since the aim of life should be to attain bliss?" In reply we say that, although sorrow due to separation from Kṛṣṇa appears to be distressing, but in reality it is a concentrated form of bliss.

"Ei prema yara mane, tara vikrama sei jane."

-(C.C)

Meaning - "The one who has this love knows its value."

Only a sensitive person will be able to realize this. All the preceptors have proved that separation from Kṛṣṇa is full of Rasa and the bliss of this Rasa is very much more than that of union. Love has two forms –

- (1) Union
- (2) Separation

Hence all loving devotees have to remain afloat in the ocean of sorrowful separation and blissful union. It is not related in any way to material sorrow and joy. Only a lover can express it. Sri Sanatana has written in his purport –

"Yaṭhāgni praṭiyogī ghanahiamdisparsena paḍadyangedu jāyamāan parama mahajādasya jwalādangāra sparsavadabhijna syāt, aṭṭra hi yathāngārasparsapraṭiṭirmiṭhyā parama mahājādyameva saṭyam, taṭhāṭṛāpi duhkhasya praṭiṭer miṭhyaṭvam eva sukhasyaiva saṭyaṭvam vijñeyam."

Meaning – 'Although ice is opposite to fire, when our feet touch ice, it becomes numb and starts burning as if they have touched hot coal. The feeling of hot coal is false, but the numbness is true. In the same way, in separation from Kṛṣṇa, the feeling of sorrow is false and the feeling of bliss is real."

In his text, Ujjvala Nīlamani, Śrī Rūpa has proved that there is Rasa in separation while discussing the various types of amour. He has stated that separation enhances the joy of union. In this context, Srila Visvanatha says in his Ānanḍa Ćanḍrikā purport –

"Nānu tadāpi sambhoga posakaţvena sambhogangamasţu an ţu pārţhakyena arso bhaviţumarhaţiţi ceţ, saţyam. Na kevalam vipralambhah sambhoga posaka eva kinţu ārţi prema snehādibhava vaţor naykayor miţha smaaransphurţyavirbhāvairmanasa caksuṣā akyikalinganacumbana samprayoagdinam praţyuṭa niravaḍhi camaṭkāra samarpakaţvena sambhogapunjamaya eva."

Meaning – "If the only job of separation is to enhance the joy of union, it should be called a part of conjugal Rasa; Why should it be given the honor of being a Rasa on its own? The reply to this question is – 'Separation does not nourish conjugation only. The separated hero and heroine who are in a permanent mood of passion and love constantly think deeply about each other. This gives them a remarkable relish, which is more than actual conjugation. Hence separation has been categorized as a separate Rasa."

Following are the examples of viraha (separation) Rasa -

- (1) When Mahaprabhu left home after becoming a mendicant
- (3) When He went away to South India and then to Vrndavana
- (4) When He disappeared (refer 1st chapter Caitanya Caritamrta Mahakavya by Kavi Karnapura and 2nd and 3rd chapter of Bhaktiratnakar)
- (5) Farewell to King Nanda when Lord Krsna departed to Mathura (refer 6th and 7th chapter of Gopala Campu)
- (6) The disappearance of lord Kṛṣṇa in Dwaraka
- (7) The exile of Lord Rama etc.

In the state of love, the devotees feel pangs of sorrow in separation from God. Western mystics have called this "pain of God or dark night of the soul." This is definitely the state before the actual meeting. Sri Visvanatha has written in Machurya Kadambini –

"Then the devotee considers his friends to be like a dark well, house like a thorny forest, food to be painful, duty to be like death and sleep (which is rare) to be the end of his life. He is always awake and considers this state of awakening to be remorseful, life to be like scorched grains, and even Divine thoughts to be self-destructive. He is unable to bear sorrow anymore and faints."

Gopakumara too had undergone all this -

"Iṭṭham vāsam nikuñje'smin vṛnḍāvana vibhūṣaṇe, ekāad roḍanambhoḍau nimagno mohamavraajm." - (V.B. 2.6.6.)

Meaning – "In this way, crying in this flower-grove which is an ornament of Vṛndavana, I fainted." This state of fainting is also called 'RASA-MOHA' – a state of Rasa-relish. Tears and shivering occur in the primary stage, the next stage is horripilation, perspiration and paling, while the last stage is stupefaction, fainting and death. Thus, in this state also Gopakumāra is relishing Divine-Rasa.

"While relishing Rasa, all inner and outer senses stop working. What remains is Rasa-relish."

- (A.K. 5th chapter)

All these states of Gopakumāra are the results of his permanent mood, that is love. In the state of passion, Gopakumara had aroused purity, clarity and softness in the reader's heart by his activities and other emotions. Now in the state of love, he is purifying the reader's heart even more. His activities are melting our hearts and making them more capable and anxious to relish Rasa. When he is experiencing the mood of love, the reader too is having feelings similar to his. This remarkable thing called equalization is the secret of relishing Rasa.

We had mentioned how Gopakumāra had fainted. In this context the science of Rasa states that there are forty-nine moods classified as Rasa. Of these, in inertia and stupefaction, only the outer senses stop working while the inner feelings go on working. Becoming semi-conscious is also a state of special relish. It occurs when the feelings become more than the feelings that cause inertia and stupefaction. In stupefaction, the five senses of hearing, seeing, touching, smelling and tasting become inactive, but the brain continues to function. In the semi-conscious state (pralaya), knowledge ceases. In the unconscious state (moha), the brain stops functioning totally. Fainting is not the climax of devotional practise. The one who experiences satisfaction is said to be 'satisfied'. Similarly the one who relishes Divine rasa is called a 'devotee'. The climax of devotional practise is the relish of Divine rasa.

- (purport of Srī Jīva to B.R.S.2.4.98)

Meaning - " In the state of pralaya (semi-consciousness), outer activities stop totally, while in moha (unconsciousness), the inner faculties stop."

Thus we see that in moha, all the faculties stop. This does not happen in any other state. It is a state of being 'free from all perception'. The Rasa of moha is like being totally immersed in Rasa.

"Asyānyaṭrāṭmā paryanṭe syāṭ sarvaṭraiva mudhaṭā, Kṛṣṇa sphuraṭi viśeṣaṣṭu na kaḍāpyaṭra liyaṭe."

- (B.R.S. 2.4.98.)

Meaning – "Even when a Krsna-devotee becomes unconscious and his faculties stop functioning, he does not forget Krsna."

Śrī Viśvanātha has thus explained the above verse -

"Svasyantam vinā bhavanāma anvasthieth."

Meaning - "If he forgets Kṛṣṇa, his state will not be called 'mood' at all."

When Gopakumara was crying in separation from Krsna and had fainted, although he did not get Krsna outside, he had felt Him in his innermost heart. 'Vipralambha' means capturing someone in your heart. Gopakumara had forgotten his body, home and everything else, but he was experiencing the sweet blissful form of Krsna. Here following the principle stated by Śrī Madhusūdana Saraswati, we can classify Gopakumara's permanent mood as passion for Krsna, Lord Madana Gopāla being the subject of his love. He repeatedly meditated on Krsna, chanted and glorified His Holy Names. The places of His pastimes excited him. His activities consisted of lamentation, wailing, rolling on the ground etc. Tears and shivering were his silent feelings, while anxiety, fainting, humility etc. were his passing moods. The reader having a similar desire undergoes equalization and relishes the Rasa of love and devotion most blissfully.

We have already mentioned that when passion awakens, material desires are destroyed and the reader's heart becomes transcendental. Then there is no problem for the devotee to relish transcendental Divine Rasa with transcendental body and senses. He constantly relishes Divine Rasa and in inspiration he is sometimes separated and at other times united with Krsna.

Gopakumara fainted since he was unable to bear the pangs of separation. When Lord Kṛṣṇa saw his dear devotee fainting, He was unable to remain invisible.

"Ṭaṭaśća premaiva ćumbakibhavam apādya karṣnayasibhūṭām kṛṣṇamākṛṣyaniya kaśmiṭsćana kśaṇe bhakṭasyasya nayana goćaraṇ karoṭi." - (Māḍhurya Kāḍambinī)

Meaning – "When a devotee attains such mood and state due to separation, his love acts like a magnet and attracts the iron-like Krsna who then is forced to appear before the eyes of the devotee."

"Lord Kṛṣṇa was always present with Gopakumāra. He, who is the King amongst the kind-hearted, did not send any representative, but he himself wiped the dust of Gopakumāra's body with His lotus hands made him regain consciousness by offering the fragrance of His body. This made Gopakumāra arise quickly. On beholding the lotus-face of Kṛṣṇa, he was overwhelmed with joy. He was afraid that He might disappear again. So he wanted to hold on to the golden yellow dress. In spite of being in friendly mood, he wished to hold on to the dress and not to His hand because he was afraid of hurting His soft body."

- (V.B.2.6.7-9)

From the above three verses we can ascertain the characteristics of the Bhakţi-Rasa of union. Here Gopakumāra's permanent feeling is that of passion for Kṛṣṇa who is the subject; Kṛṣṇa's touch, fragrance, affectionately wiping the body are exciting causes that resulted in activities such as respectfully getting up. Tears, thrill, overwhelming joy are silent activities while curiosity, joy etc. are passing moods. In this manner Gopakumāra relished the RASA OF UNION. This parable arouses the desire for devotion in an appreciating audience. This feeling is further nourished by equalization. In this way, they relish most beautiful Divine Rasa.

We have seen in detail how the audience having a desire similar to that of Gopakumara who is in a friendly mood, will relish Rasa. According to the Rasa-scientists, the relish of Rasa differs according to the different passions.

RASA-RELISH OCCURS ACCORDING TO DIFFERENT PASSIONS

"Bhakṭabheḍe raṭibheḍ pancaparakāra, Śanṭa-raṭi, Dāsya-raṭi, Sakhya-raṭi āra. Vāṭsalya-raṭi, Maḍhurā-raṭi e panca vibeḍa, raṭi bheḍe Kṛṣṇa-Bhakṭi Rasa panca bheḍa. Śānṭa, Dāsya, Sakhya, vāṭsalya, Maḍhura-Rasa nāma, KṛṣṇaBhakṭiRasa maḍhye e panca pRaḍhāna."

- (C.C. Madhya.19th chapter)

Meaning – "There are five types of passions depending on the feelings of devotees. They are as follows – Sānṭa (subdued), Dāsya (servitude), Sakhya (friendly), Vāṭsalya (parental), Maḍhura (conjugal)."

According to the different passions, there are also different Rasas, viz., Santa, Dasya, Sakhya, vatsalya and Madhura-Rasa.

SEVEN SECONDARY RASAS

The author of Alamkāra Kaustubha has called <code>Dāsya-Rasa</code> as 'Bhakti-Rasa', Sakhya-Rasa as 'prema-Rasa' and Madhura-Rasa as 'śṛṅgāra-Rasa'. Besides these five main Rasas, there are seven secondary Rasas as well. They are hāsya (laughter), aḍbhūṭa (marvelous), vira (bravery), karuṇa (sad), rauḍra (anger), vibhaṭsa (repulsion) and bhaya (fear).

"PancaRasa sthāyi vyāpi rehe bhaktamane, Saptaguṇa agantuka paie kāraṇe."

- (C.C.Madhya.19)

Meaning-"These seven Rasas may occur in the heart of a devoter if some such incident occurs, but they will disappear once the cause is removed. The main Rasas however always remain in the heart of a devotee."

Śrī Jīva has written in his purport to verse number 10.43.14 of Śrīmad Bhāgavaṭam -

"Aṭhā ye'ney'dbhuṭaḍayo bhāgavaṭāh sapṭaRasasṭe'pi ṭesu bhāgavaṭpriyajaneṣu bhāgavaṭ priṭerevavirbhavanṭi ṭaṭṭadRasasañćāribhāvapraya gauṇatvanvaṭra ganyanṭe."

Meaning – "The seven types of Bhakṭi-Rasa viz. Adbhuṭa etc. appear and disappear in the devotees. They are like the passing waves in the five main Rasas. Hence we are not discussing them separately here."

We too shall discuss the five main Rasas in short. Those who wish to know more about the seven secondary Rasas may refer to the first seven chapters of Uttara section of B.R.S.

THE SUBDUED DEVOTEE AND THE SUBDUED RASA

"sanțera svabhava kṛṣṇe mamața gandha-hina, parabrahma-paramatnia-jinana pravina."

- (C.C)

Meaning - "The subdued devotee does not have even an iota of fondness for Krṣṇa. He treats Kṛṣṇa with awe and respect. He accepts Kṛṣṇa as the Supreme Being, Super Soul and mature with knowledge."

Śri Jiva has said -

"Eteşu bhagavat priyeşu samanya sanatu tatasthakhyau. Anayoh prifisća tatasthakhya."

- (Prītisandarbha 84th chapter)

Meaning - "The subdued devotee as well as his devotion are called 'marginal'."

Śrī Jīva has called subdued Bhakţi as 'marginal' most probably because it is without any affection for Kṛṣṇa. When we see the moon we feel happy, but we do not feel the moon belongs to me or I belong to the moon. In the same way, the subdued devotee has no feeling of belonging with the Supreme Being. Yet, a feeling of love and affection alone can be termed as Bhakţi. In Nāraḍa Pancarāṭra, it is written—

"Ananyamamaṭāvisṇau mamaaṭ premasangaṭā, Bhakṭiriṭyucyaṭe bhiṣmaprahlādoḍdhaavnaarḍaih."

Meaning – "When one does not have fondness for anything else, but has loving attachment for Lord Viṣṇu, it is termed as Bhakṭi by great preceptors such as Bhiṣma, Prahlāḍa, Uḍḍhava, Nāraḍa etc."

 \acute{Sri} Jiva says – "It is logical that the subdued devotees do not have any fondness for \acute{Sri} Bhagavān, because they have no special relation with Him."

- (P.S. 92nd chapter)

The devotees in the other four Rasas are fond of Him because they have established a relation with Him. Hence the attachment of the subdued devotees are considered to be Jesser than that of the associates (devotees in servitude etc.) Śri Jiva has called the feelings such as fondness for the subject to be a part of devotion."

Brahman has no specialty, nor any strength. It has only one quality – It is eternal. Paramatma (Super Soul) has one more quality (other than being eternal) viz. Consciousness, while Śrī Bhagavān has more splendor and is superior to Brahman and Paramātmā, since He is eternal, conscious and blissful as well. Hence the associates of Śrī Bhagavān are superior as compared to the experienced, knowledgeable, subdued devotees of Brahman and Paramātmā.

The activities of subdued devotees comprise of a tendency towards Brahman, loyalty to Brahman and sometimes glorification etc. the loving activities of the associates comprise of various services and caring for the Lord. Service is the soul of Bhakṭi.

"Bhaj ityaisa vai dhatuh sevayam parikirtitah."

-(B.R.S.)

Meaning - "The root word 'Bhaj' in Sanskrit means 'to render service'."

The subdued devotees feel God is self-joyous, self-satisfied, has neither hunger nor thirst, is complete in all respect and hence do not need our service. In B.R.S., Śrī Rūpa Goswāmi has called <code>Dasya-bhava</code> as a well wisher of Śanṭa-bhava. In his opinion, 'Dasya-bhava is not just a 'well-wisher', but an excellent well-wisher of Śanṭa-bhava'. He has quoted a Śanṭa devotee saying thus –

"Jivasfulingavanhermahaso ghanaćitsvarūpasya, tasyu padambujayugalam, kimva samvahayisyami?" -(B.R.S.4.8.20)

Śrī Jīva has thus explained the above verse -

"Ghanah Śrīvigrahasṭaḍakaar ya ćiṭ saċćiḍānanḍa laksaṇāṃ paraṃ brahma Saiva svarūpaṃ yasya tāḍṛṣaṭvena mamalambanasyeṭi taṭra svaniṣṭha darśiṭā."

Meaning – "'Ghana' (intensely) refers to the Divine form of Śrī Bhagavān; otherwise why would he use the words 'the lotus feet'? 'Conscious' means 'eternal, conscious and blissful', because 'conscious' means knowledge or realization; but knowledge has an inseparable relation with bliss. Hence we conclude that the subdued devotee has expressed his feelings for the eternal, conscious and blissful Supreme Being."

Śri Jiva continues -

"Padasamvāhaneccāh ca paramānanda vigrahasya atsya sparsānanda prāpticcahiva na tu sahayyenanandadanecchāya, purnānandatvena atsya sfuranāt."

Meaning – "The subdued devotee wishes to massage the lotus-feet because he wants to feel the joy of touching the Supremely blissful Divine form of the Supreme Being, and not because he wishes to give pleasure to Sri Bhagavān (unlike the Dāsya-devotees). This is because they feel that the Supreme being is already 'ever so blissful'. Even the loving actions of the subdued devotees are inferior to the loving actions of the servile devotees."

In P.S (3rd chapter) Śrī Jīva writes that the activities of a subdued devotee are – glorifying the qualities of the Lord, uttering the names such as Parabrahma and Paramatma, concentrating on the tip of the nose, etc. The Divine qualities such as being limitless, calm, unchanging, having amazing forms (the innumerable headed Supreme Being having countless hands and legs) etc. arouse their bhāva. Their passing moods are – patience, joy, remembrance, sorrow, argument etc.

"Krsna nişthā tṛṣṇā tyāga sanyera dui guņe"

-(C.C)

Meaning - " The other four Rasas are rooted in the following two qualities -

- (1) loyalty to Kṛṣṇa
- (2) giving up all material desires

THE SERVILE DEVOTEE AND RESPECTFUL LOVE

There is no subdued devotee in Vraja. Even the Rasa of servitude is rare.

"Purnaiśwarya prabhujñāna adhika haya dāsye."

-(C.C)

Meaning - "The devotees who are in servile Rasa consider Kṛṣṇa to be the Lord and Master. They are aware of His opulence."

Śrī Rupa has termed the permanent mood of the servile devotees as 'love mixed with awe'.

"Sambhramah prabhuṭā jñānāṭ kampa ceṭasi sāḍarah, anenaikyam gaṭā prīṭih sambhrama prīṭirucyaṭe, eṣa rase'ṭra akṭhiṭa bhāva ṭayā buḍhaih."
-(B.R.S. 3.2.76)

Meaning – "When we consider someone to be our master, our heart trembles a little. This is called awe. The wise ones have decided that this is the permanent mood of servile devotees."

We have said that when there is awe and hesitation in a relation, the extent of love becomes less.

"Aiswarya jnanete hay samkućita priti."

-(c.c)

Meaning - "Love becomes less when one is aware of opulence"

Yet, the servants of Vraja are in a different mood as compared to other servants. Śrī Jīva has said –

"Saća akrūrādinām aiswarya jnaan pradhānah. Śrimaduddhavādinām tattat sadbhave'pi mādhurya jnaan pRadhānah. Śriwrajasthāntu amdhirayikāmayaeva. Athapyeṣām priterBhaktitvam Śri goparajakumāraparamagunaprabhavatvādinaivadaarsadbhavat."

- (P.S. 208th chapter)

Meaning – "There are many types of servile devotees. Akrura etc. are more conscious of the Lord's opulence. Uddhava etc. are conscious of opulence, but more conscious of sweetness, while the servants of Vraja are conscious of sweetness alone. They do not consider Kṛṣṇa as God. They only feel that the Prince of Vraja is highly talented and has great authority."

"Kṛṣṇake iśwara nahi jane Vrajajana."

-(C.C)

Meaning - "The people of Vraja are not aware that Kṛṣṇa is God."

THE SERVANTS IN VRAJA OFFER SWEET SERVICE

Śrīla Karnapūra has wonderfully described the sweet service of the servants of Vraja during the evening pastime in his book Śrī Kṛṣṇānhika Kaumuḍi. When Mother Yaśoḍā ordered the servants to bathe her son who had just arrived from the pasture, one of them took the trumpet, flute and stick; someone took off the flower garland while another removed the jewelry. A chief servant disrobed Him and dusted all parts of His body. Some servant joyfully wiped His lotus-face with a soft cloth and combed His hair. One of them smilingly massaged Him very gently with smooth fragrant oil. Thereafter he rubbed smooth sandalwood paste. A servant massaged His hair with sweet smelling emlic myrobalan oil and bathed Him with cool water scented with thick sandalwood paste. Someone wiped Him with soft white cloth and pat dried His hair. Another one took away His wet clothes, robed Him in bright yellow dress and put a very beautiful soft yellow upper garment on His Broad chest. If these servants were aware of His Divinity, they would not have been able to serve Him in such carefree manner. Hence Śrī Jīva Goswāmi has termed this respectful love as 'all sweet'.

[N.B. – Those who wish to know more about subdued and servitude Rasa may refer to B.R.S. and 'Bhakṭirasaprasanga' written by my Most Worshiped Spiritual Master 'Niṭyalīla Praviṣta Om Viṣṇupād Śrīmaṭ KUNJA VIHĀRI DĀS BĀBĀJI Mahārāj.]

Servitude Rasa is aroused by obtaining mercy, the dust of the lotus feet, Mahaprasadam, association of other servile devotees etc. Their activities are – serving in their own rights, loyalty to Krsna and His devotees, etc. They possess the silent feelings of stupefaction. Their passing moods comprise of joy, pride, patience, remorse, humility and curiosity.

In the Srimad Bhagavatam there is no mention of Raktak, Patrak etc. who served in Dasya-Rasa. We do not know whether their names have been mentioned in any scripture (such as Puranas, Samhita or Tantras) prior to Śrīla Rūpa Goswami's Rādhā-Krsna Ganoddesa Dipika. In Srimad Bhagavatam, From the first to the thirty-ninth chapter of the tenth canto, that is prior to Lord Krsna being taken away by Akrūra, we find the description of only Sakhya, vātsalya and Madhura Rasa. The Brajavasi subjects of Nanda Maharaj may possess Dasya-bhava towards Kṛṣṇa and one may develop an eager desire to serve following their footsteps, since "bhinna rucirhi lokāh" - which means, "different people have different desires." But Rakṭak, Paṭrak etc. who served in Dasya-Rasa has not been mentioned in Srimad Bhagavatam. The nature of their service has not been described either. Hence it is not easy to execute service in Dasya-mood by following the ones in servitude-Rasa.

Ćaiţanya Ćariţāmrţa says –

"Mora puṭra, mora sakhā, mora pranapaṭi Ei bhāve yei more kare suḍḍhā Bhakṭi"

-(C.C)

Meaning – "One should execute pure devotional service by considering Me as one's son, friend and beloved."

Serving devotionally in vāṭsalya and Maḍhura Rasa are the main Rāgānugā Bhakṭi in Vraja.

"Sakhya-Rasa comprises of the qualities of both Sanţa and Dāsya. In Dāsya, there is reverence for the master, while in Sakhya-Rasa there is confidence. Sakhya is confidence-oriented and devoid of awe and reverence. Thus Sakhya-Rasa has three qualities – more affection for Kṛṣṇa, considering no difference between Kṛṣṇa and oneself, thus winning over the Supreme Personality completely."

-(C.C.Madhya.19th chapter)

We have already discussed Sakhya-Rasa in the parable of Gopakumara; hence there is no need to dwell anymore on this topic.

VĀTSALYA RASA

" $V\bar{a}tsalya$ comprises of the qualities of $S\bar{a}nta$, $D\bar{a}sya$ and Sakhya such as frankness and lack of awe. There is more affection and an added quality is chastisement. The devotee considers himself to be the guardian while Krsna is considered to be the ward. $V\bar{a}tsalya$ is nectarine due to the presence of the previous four Rasas."

-(C.C.Madhya.19th ch)

"Aţha vatsalyakhyah sţhayi"

-(P.S)

"Tanmaṭarau nijasuṭau ghṛṇayā snuvanṭau pankāngaragarućiravupaguhya dorbhyam, daṭṭvasṭānaṃ prapivaṭoh sma mukhaṃ nirikśayah mugḍhāsmiṭalpaḍaśanaṃ yaayṭuh pramoḍam."

-(Bhag.10.8.17)

Meaning – "In Vāṭsalya Rasa, the parental mood is permanent. Filled with this bhāva the breasts of Yasodā and Rohini were ever flowing with milk. They used to enfold both of them (Kṛṣṇa and Balarām) who were thoroughly covered with dust, in their laps and breast-feed them. When the babies suckled, the mothers enjoyed supreme bliss by beholding their faces, the beauty of which were enhanced by their smiles that revealed few budding teeth. Here the mothers are the objects of love while Kṛṣṇa and Baladev are the subjects. Kṛṣṇa-Balaram's tender age, soft smiles, childish pranks, kisses, petting, tears, rapture, flowing breasts, joy, curiosity, intense emotion etc. together form 'Vāṭsalya Rasa'. When this is heard and glorified, the desire to please Kṛṣṇa in a similar manner is aroused in the devotee. Thus he relishes 'Vāṭsalya-Rasa'.

Vātsalya-Rasa in separation, viz. -

"Yate rājapūram harau mukhaṭaṭi vyakiraṇa – dhūmraka, pasya srasṭaṭanuh kathoraluthanairdehe vranam kurvaṭi. Ksiṇa goṣthamahimahendramahiṣi hā puṭra puṭreṭyasau, krosasti karayoryugena kuruṭe kastaduRasaṭranam."

-(B.R.S.3.4.63)

Meaning – "When Kṛṣṇa left for Mathura, Mother Yasoda's face was covered with wisps of disheveled hair, her beauty was reduced and bruised due to constant rolling on the earth. She loudly beat her breasts, crying out – 'O my dear son! O my dear son!'"

Here, Mother Yasodā is the object of love. Kṛṣṇa who has left for Maṭhurā is the subject. The empty house, Kṛṣṇa's flute, stick etc. that bring back His memories are the exciting causes. Wailing, expression of heart rending grievance, rolling on the ground, tears, horripilation, sorrow, remorse, misery, restlessness, insanity, swooning etc. are the activities. The desire for this Rasa is awakened and nourished in listeners with similar feelings thus enabling them to relish Vāṭsalya Rasa in separation.

MADHURA RASA

Now let us discuss $Madhura\ Rasa$. In Sri Caitanya Caritamrta we see -

"In Madhura Rasa, there is more attachment and service to Kṛṣṇa. It is incorporated with the confidence of Sakhya and with plenty of love and care. The Gopis serve Kṛṣṇa as his consorts by offering their bodies. Thus Madhura Rasa has the qualities of all the five Rasa. Just as the qualities of all the five elements (ether, air, fire, water and earth) are present in the earth, all the moods collectively lend their tastes to Madhura Rasa, thereby causing wonderful relish."

-(C.C. Madhya.19)

MADHURA RASA AND BRAJA-SUNDARIS

The queens of Dwaraka possess samanjasā-rati while Kubjā etc. possess ordinary passion. Both express Madhura-Rasa. Yet, in this book we have been citing examples of natural and spontaneous Bhakti of the Varjavasis alone. Hence our topic of discussion and relish shall be only the parakāyā Madhura-Rasa shown by the beauties of Vraja. In the purport of Srimad Vrhad Bhagavatāmṛta, Srī Sanātana Goswāmi has said –

"Although the entire Śrimad Bhāgavaṭam is the embodiment of Rasa and is devoid of anything rejectable, even then, to the one who is lusty for the lotus-feet of the Lord of the Gopis, any Rasa (such as, Sakhya or Vāṭsalya) other than the erotic Rasa do not appear very interesting."

Although we find that Mahaprabhu states in Caitanya

"Ćari bhaver Bhakti diya nacaimu bhuvan."

Meaning - "I shall make the world dance by distributing the four modes of Bhakti."

Even then, the supremely brilliant, hitherto unoffered prema-Bhakti following in the footsteps of Braja-gopis is one Rasa that has been specially given by Mahaprabhu. This is called Raganuga or Kamanuga Bhakti in Madhura Rasa.

The tenth canto of Śrīmad Bhāgavaṭam is the lotus face of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Śrīla Viśvanāṭha has called it the 'sweet smile' of Kṛṣṇa. In the tenth canto, the Rasa Lila is the jewel in the crown of all the pastimes. Śrīla Viśvanāṭha and Śrīla Sanāṭana has called the Rāsa Lilā 'the five vital airs' of Kṛṣṇa while Śrīla Jīva Goswāmi has called it 'the five senses' of Kṛṣṇa. In the five chapters containing Rasa, there is no mention of Sakhya or Vāṭṣalya Rasa. Only the love of the Gopis has been described here. This is the love in the mode of sweetness. Hence the feeling of devotion that will develop as a result of hearing the Rāsa Lilā will definitely be in the footsteps of the Gopis, and not in accordance with the Sakhya or Vāṭṣalya Rasa.

In his purport to the fruits of hearing about Rāsa-Lilā - in verses such as -"Vikriditam varjavadhūbhirinca viṣnoh" etc. Srīla Jīva Goswāmi could have translated 'param Bhakṭim' simply as 'Bhakṭi that is a sign of love'. In stead, he has written 'that which is of most supreme quality, born due to following in the footsteps of the love of the Gopis '. If any fortunate person develops any desire as a result of hearing the Rāsa-Lilā, it will be not be one with the mood of Kṛṣṇa. "Yah srutva ṭaṭ paro bhaveṭ" - means, 'if you listen to the Rāsa-Lila, you will never consider yourself at par with Kṛṣṇa, rather you will develop a liking for Him. This is the inconceivable power of Kṛṣṇa."

PARAKĪYĀ RASA

Śri Śri Rāsa-Lilā is filled with the description of pure parakīyā-Rasa from A to Z. The authors of worldly Rasa say that Rasa ends when the heroine is married to another man. Sāhitya Darpan says that married women should be strictly avoided. But such rules do not apply to Kṛṣṇa and the Braja-beauties. Their parakīyā-blīāva is an ornament, not ominous.

Rupa Goswami has written -

"Nesta yadanginirase akvibhih parodha tade gokulambujadršam kulamantarena, asamsaya Rasavidehravataritanam kamsarina rasikamandala sekharena."

-(U.N - Nāyikābheda - 3)

Meaning – "Illicit relations are to be condemned only in the material world. In material love stories, the presence of a paramour in spite of being married is detrimental to Rasa. But this does not apply to Kṛṣṇa, the King of all gallant heroes and the lotus-eyed Braja-beauties."

This is because Kṛṣṇa Himself has reposed parakīyā-bhāva in the Braja-beauties who are the expressions of Hlādini-sakṭi (pleasure potency), His eternal consort, with the help of Yoganūya in order to enjoy the nectar of transcendental love. Hence, in reality, there is no illicitness in the relation between Kṛṣṇa and the Braja-beauties who are overflowing with transcendental blies.

"There is no bad taste in the love of the Gopis."

-(C.C.)

"Anaicitya pravrtattve abhasah Rasabhavayoh"

-(B.R.S.)

Meaning – "The tendency towards impropriety is called 'Rasābhas'."

In B.R.S. we see -

"purvamevaanusustena vikala arsalaksana, raaseva raasbhāsa Rasajñayiarnu kirtitah."

Meaning – "If all the characteristics of Rasa mentioned before, are not present, it is called 'Rasābhas'."

The love of the Gopis is resplendent with all the characteristics of Rasa, because their love is pure. Hence, although they are attached to Kṛṣṇa as paramour, there is no possibility of Rasābhās.

"The Gopis are experienced in pure prema Rasa" - (C.C.)

The extra-marital relationship of the Gopis is the exclusive base of Rasa and the eternal wealth of love in Vṛṇḍāvana. Although the Brajavāsis are the transcendental embodiments of Kṛṣṇa's own pleasure potency, they are established in the eternal parakīyā Rasa. This is the inconceivable, spiritual sweetness of the very embodiment of sweet Rasa – Śrī Goviṇḍa. Śrīla Kavirāj Goswāmi has written –

"Parakīya bhāve aṭi rasera ullās, braja vīnā ihār ānhi anyatra vāsa."

-(C.C.)

Meaning – "there is great exultation in parakiyā-Rasa. This joy is not found anywhere other than Vraja."

The reader must seriously remember this fact always. This relation is beyond all arguments and logic. It is inconceivable by the mind. The sweet pastimes of the Supreme Personality cannot be emulated and they are definitely not bound by the rules of karma (action and reaction). It cannot be controlled by the human society. These Rasa-filled pastimes are irrespective of time, unrelated to karma, unrelated to the modes of nature. It is the most powerful mood in the eternal, transcendental Kingdom where its only aim is to heighten the splendor of Rasa. In this material world, hellish extra-marital affairs lead to innumerable sinful activities and are tainted with 'Rasābhas'. But the affairs of Braja Gopis are devoid of even the slightest hint of lust, and are filled with pure transcendental Rasa. Hence, there is no Rasabhas; it only oozes Rasa. So, it is said –

"Laghuţavmaţra yaţ prokţam ţaţţu parkrţanayake, na krşņe Rasa niryas svadarţham vaaţrini."

-(U.N., Nayakabheda)

Jīva Goswāmi has thus described the height of love in pārakiyā-Rasa -

"duhkhasya paarmakastha kulavadhunam svayamapi paarmaamryadanam svajanaryapathabhyam bhramsa eva, nagnyadirnacamaranam. Tatasca tatkaritaya pratit'opi Srikrsnasambandhah sukhaya kalpyate cet tarhyevam argasay oaarma iyatta. Tatasca tamasrityaiva pravrtto'nurago bhavaya kalpate."

Meaning – "It is a sorry state of affairs if a woman of good family strays from the path of right conduct. They would prefer to enter a kindled fire or drink poison rather than sacrifice the family-honor."

The beauties of Braja have transgressed boundaries of social norms. This proves the height of their love. It is due to this that their love has attained the state of Mahābhāva. Jiva Goswāmi has said -

"Antarangena ragenaiavrpitatmano na tu vahiarngena vivaha prakriaytmakena dharmena."

-(Locana Rocani)

Śrila Rupa Goswami ahs said -

"Atraiva srngarsya paramotkarsah pratisthiath"

Meaning – "The supreme splendor of amour is present only in the parakīvā mood."

The infinite characteristics of *Kṛṣṇa'*s pastimes are secured in the endless exultation of the infinite diversities of erotic sports in parakīyā Rasa. The parakīyā bhāvā has created rarity, veiled passion and many obstructions on the path of the Braja-beauties, thus causing waves in the ocean of amorous sports. But their love is not caused because of this rarity or obstruction in their path. Their love is considered special because of samarthā-raţi.

Jiva Goswami has written in his Priti sandarbha, 279th chapter -

"Kecittuvaranāditā evasām premādhikyam manyante, tanna. Jāṭito'pyadhikyat......pravala jāṭitvan nivāraṇaḍikaṃ apyamatikramāt ityevameva ślāghyate ya duṣtyajam ityaḍinā. Maṭṭa hastīnāṃ balasya durgaṭikramaavn niavraṇāḍi aṭikramo hi tasam prema balāsay vyanjaka eva nāṭuḍ paaḍkah. Jāṭyamseaniva pravalye saṭi nivāraṇāḍi samo'pi ṭāṣam sveṣu premaṭarātamyam sambhavaṭi."

Meaning - "Some say that the Braja-beauties have unsurpassable love because it is extra-marital and it has many obstacles. But this is not so. By birth they are the proud possessors of samartha-rati. Because of this, the love of the Gopis has been capable of transgressing all obstacles. Hence great devotees such as Uddhava has praised it in words such as -'ya dustyajam svajanam Taryapathanca hitva' (they have given up their relatives and civilized norms). When an elephant performs a very difficult task, its strength is only expressed; it is not as if the strength is born just then, Similarly, when the Braja-beauties cross all barriers, the power of their love has been expressed, not created. The proof of this lies in the fact that although the extent of barriers is the same for all Gopis, Radliarani and all show many more loving activities because they possess stronger love. On the other hand, although Kubjā had barriers and showed parakīyā-like Rasa, her love was inferior (because she had lusty desire) and hence is called 'sadharani-rați'.

Some are unable to comprehend the serious statements of Jīva Goswāmi. They think that this parakīyā-bhāva that is the height of Braja-Rasa is temporary and exists only during the manifested pastimes of the Lord. In fact, if we do not accept the eternal nature of parakīyā-bhāva, we are uprooting samarṭhā-raṭi itself. If we do not accept this Rasa as eternal, this splendid Bhajan will also be rendered temporary.

THE ETERNAL NATURE OF PARAKIYĀ-VIBHĀVA AND ITS SUPERIORITY

Jiva Goswami has firmly established the eternal nature of every pastime of the Lord in his Bhāgavat sandarbha. While establishing the eternal nature of parakīyā-bhāva, in his purport to verses such as "asamaho canaanrenujusamaham" (Bhāg.10.47.54.), while explaining the part "sruṭibhirvimṛgyam" he has written - "sruṭibhirvimṛgyamiti ṭasya nityaṭvaṃ sarvoṭṭamaṭvanca gamyaṭe." This means that, since parakiyā-bhāva is sought after by the sages, we consider it to be eternal and supreme.

In the very beginning of his book, "Gopāla campū", Śrī Jīva has decided to describe a non-manifested pastime of Goloka. There are unlimited manifestations of Vṛnḍāvana. It is not necessary that the same pastimes will take place in all the manifestations. The inconceivable and undoubtedly powerful Supreme Personality performs infinite pastimes in infinite roles in infinite manifestations. Just because in Gopāla Campū, one comes across a pastime performed in svakīyā-bīava in one of the manifestations and one reads a word or two in Locana Rocanī, one should not foolishly conclude parakīyā-Rasa to be temporary. In the 52nd chapter of Pāṭāla Khaṇda of Paḍma Puārṇa we find - gocāranām vayasyasca vināsuar vighāṭanaṃ, paarkiyābhimaninyasṭaṭha aṭsya priyah jaanh pracchannenaiva bhāvena armayanṭi nijam priyam."

Meaning – "The Purāṇas have glorified the manifested pastimes of the Lord. These are nothing but the eternal pastimes of Śrī Vṛndāban. Except the killing of asuras, all other pastimes, such as, playing with His friends and taking the cattle for grazing are eternal. He meets His beloved secretly in parakiyā bhāva alone."

The Puranas tell us that the parakiyā-bhāva in the non-manifested Vrajadhām is eternal. Many other scriptures and mahājanas also say the same. Due to lack of space these details are not being mentioned here. In this context, the conclusion and opinion of Srila Visvanātha as expressed in his purport to verses such as "laghutvam aṭra yaṭ prokṭvam" etc. found in Ujjvala Nīlamaṇi, are of extreme importance. Those who wish to know the details of this topic should definitely refer to it.

DEVOTION IN THE FORM OF PASSION

Since the parakīyā-bhāva of the damsels of Vraja is rare in the ocean of love, the scriptures call it 'devotion in the form of passion' or 'kāmarūpā-Bhakṭi'.

"Premaiva goparamanam kāma iţyagamat praţham"

-(Tantravaćana)

Rupa Goswami has defined kama-rupa Bhakti as follows -

"Sa kamarupa sambhogatṛṣṇām ya nayaṭi svaṭām, yaaḍsyam kṛṣṇasaukhyarṭham eva kevalamuḍyamah."

- (B.R.S.1.2.283)

Meaning - "The loving devotional service that lends its qualities to the thirst for copulation (i.e. makes it loving as well), since we find that everytime an occasion for erotic desire arises, the Gopis exhibit enthusiasm only for Kṛṣṇa's pleasure, such loving devotion is called 'kāmarupā Bhakṭi'."

To explain the above verse, Śrī Jīva has said –

"Kamo'tra sveşta vişaya argatmaka prema vişayah"

Meaning - "Here 'kama' (passion) refers to the all-beneficial love."

The process by which the loving devotion of the Braja-beauties become one with erotic desire is explained by \acute{Sri} Visvanātha in his purport to verses such as "sarvaḍbhūṭovilasormi" in Ujjvala Nīlamaṇi in this way –

"Tathahyasya rateh swarupasiddhatvad gunadi sarvananupeksitatvena pravalyadvayah sandheh purvameva braajbalasu arteh.....pradurbhavah. samanya karena pradurbhutayanac atsaym tasam Sri Krsna eva pritimatinam sarvendriya vrttayah Sri Krsna sukha tatparyavatya eva bhuvan. Athayate vayahsandhau kandarpodgamena ya sambhogatrsna ratyakrante manasyajanisat sapi tatsikha tatparyavatyebhuditi sambhogatrsnaya artya saha tadatmyam."

Meaning - "Sweet pleasures are not possible without erotic desires. C.C. says - 'kānṭa bhāve nijānga diya korena sevan" (The Gopis serve Kṛṣṇa by offering their own bodies in the mood of a consort). The Gopis had natural and spontaneous love for Kṛṣṇa before they attained adolescence. Their love did not wait for them to hear about Kṛṣṇa's beauty and qualities. All their senses were resolved to serve Kṛṣṇa alone. When they attained puberty, the erotic desire that arose in them due to the attack of Cupid, naturally had the propensity to give pleasure to Kṛṣṇa. This is how their devotion is non-different from erotic desire."

"Vraja-vinā ihār anyaṭra nāhi vāsa."

-(C.C.)

Meaning - "Such unison of devotion and erotic desire is possible in only the Braja-beauties; it does not exist elsewhere."

"asam premaviseşe'aym prāpṭah kāmapi amḍhuriṃ, ṭaṭṭaṭ krīdāniḍanaṭvaṭ kāam iṭyucayṭe buḍhaih" -(B.R.S.1.2.284.)

Meaning – "This indescribable sweet and self-sustained passion causes pleasure to Kṛṣṇa. To bring about this pleasure various sweet sports are arranged. Hence, the wise ones call this love "Kāma" or passion."

Hence, lust that seeks sensual gratification and satisfaction of one's own selfish desires, and the love-filled lust of the Brajabeauties are opposite to each other just as light and darkness. The lust that seeks sense gratification is as cheap as a piece of glass, while the lust of the Braja-beauties that seeks Krsna's pleasure alone is like a priceless diamond. Jīva Goswāmi has said –

"Esābhāvah (kānṭābhāvah) kāmaṭulyāṭvaṭ Śrī gopikāṣu kāmāḍiśabḍeanpyabhihiṭāh. Smarākhya-kāma-viśeṣastvanya vailakśaṇyat. Kāmasāmanyam khalu spṛhā asmānyaṭmakam. Prīti samanyanṭu vuṣāyānukulyātmak sṭaḍānugataviṣaya spṛhādimayo jñanaviśeṣa iṭi lakśiṭam. Ṭaṭo ḍvayo samāna prāya ćeṣtāṭve'pi kāmasāmanyasya ćeṣtā svīyanūkūlyaṭāṭparya.Śuḍḍha prītimāṭrāsya ecṣṭaṭu priyanukuyaṭaṭparyaiva."

Meaning — "This mood of a beloved can be compared to lust. Hence, in the Gopis it is termed as 'lust'. The worldly lust that goes under the heading 'love' is different from this, since great contrasts are noticed between them. Ordinarily, the word 'lust' refers to desire. The word 'love' refers to what is pleasurable to the subject of love, to know how to fulfil the desires of that subject. i.e., to gain experience in whatever causes pleasure to Kṛṣṇa who is the subject of love. Hence, although the endeavors of love and lust both appear the same, the word 'lust' indicates the fulfillment of one's own pleasure while 'love' refers to the fulfilment of the pleasures of the beloved. Thus we see -

"The love of the Gopis is not worldly lust. It is called lust because it is similar to the sports of lust. Lust refers to fulfilling one's own sense gratification, while giving pleasure to Kṛṣṇa is the only aim of the Gopis. The Gopis never desire their own sense gratification. They perform conjugal sports for the pleasure of Kṛṣṇa."

- (C.C.Madhya.8th chapter)

PURVARĀGA RASA (THE RASA OF THE PRE-CONJUGATION STATE)

Anyhow, this sweet Rasa of Krsna's consorts is again of two types

- (1) vipralambha (separation)
- (2) sambhoga (union)

The above statement is mentioned in U.N Srngarabheda.1. in the following way –

"sa vipralambhah sambhoga iti dvedhojvalo matah"

Vipralambha (separation) is of four types-

- (1) Purvaraga
- (2) Mana
- (3) Premavaicitta
- (4) Pravasa

All those who are interested in practising devotional service in a sweet mood, must specially relish the puravraga-Rasa of the heroines of Vraja. Although only the associates of the Lord who are involved in the pastimes are able to relish this Rasa since they are His confidantes, the ones who are practising devotional service can also relish this Rasa by equalization with the Rasa experienced by the eternal associates of the Lord. Srī Jīva states this in the following verse –

"Țaţra līla parikara eva aţsyasāarmanubhavanţi anţarangaţvāţ. Pare (sādhakah) ţu yaţ kincideav vahirangaţvaţ. Yadyapyeavm aţţhāpi tadanubhavamaṭam arsā sāraṃ svānubhavamayena arsenaikaṭaya vibhāvya pivaţa."

(P.S.110th ch.)

Rupa Goswami has defined Purvaraga thus -

"raţirya sangamāţ purvam darsan śravanāmadijā, atyorunmīlatiprjnyaih puravārgah sa ućayţe." -(U.N.Śṛṅgārabheḍa)

Meaning – "Before the lover and the beloved meet each other in privacy, they experience a great anxiety that stems from having seen and heard about each other. The mellow of this situation, when one spends time absorbed in the thoughts of the beloved, (and this time extends unto actual meeting) is called 'purvaraga-Rasa'."

In the material world due to the presence of great shyness, the lover is the first one to express Purvaraga. But in the world of love this rule has some exception. The loving Braja-beauties are so overflowing with love that they transcend all barriers of patience and shyness. Hence they are the first ones to express Purvaraga. Sri Rūpa has stated this as follows –

"Api mādhavaārgasay prathamye sambhavātyapi, ādau rāge mṛgāksināṃ prokṭā syaccaruaṭdhikā."
- (U.N.Śṛṅgārabheḍa.8.)

There are ten conditions in Purvaraga. These ten conditions arise after seeing and hearing about each other. First of all the eyes are delighted followed by attachment of the heart, resolution, sleeplessness, infirmity, indifference to worldly affairs, decreasing of shyness, madness, falling unconscious and at last death. Since death is inauspicious, the beloved only appears to be dead. There is no actual death in this Rasa.

Please consider the following situation -

Rāḍhārāni has not yet seen Kṛṣṇa. She has only heard the name 'ŚYĀM'. On hearing alone, the two syllables of 'Śyām' have pierced Her heart and made Her surrendered at the lotus feet of Śyāmasunḍar, who is the ocean of all Rasa. The sweet name did not even give Her any time to even think who He is, what is His identity, or how His nature is. A huge attraction always wants to drag Her on the way to the woods. Neither can She go, since She is the daughter-in-law of a respectable family, nor can She be at rest. Being helpless, She held the hand of Her dear friend and spoke with an impatient heart –

"Friend, who put the name of Syam in my ears? It has pierced my heart and torments my soul.

O, I know not what honey this name holds
It refuses to leave my lips
Benumbed I chant ceaselessly
How shall I forget Him?"

-(Padakalpataru)

Hearing is of different types such as, hearing about the qualities and pastimes, hearing the flute, hearing from the ambassaclors, eulogist, girl friend, poet etc. Once during a lonely venture on the banks of the Yamuna, Rāḍhārāni beheld the all-enchanting beautiful form of Śyām that lit up the banks of the Yamuna. Since then She had no peace. She stepped out and stepped in – as if possessed. The form moved with Her like a shadow, yet could not be caught. There is no means to get Him and yet it is difficult to live without Him. On seeing Her condition, a dear friend asks –

"You step in and step out hundreds of times
With anxious heart,

Letting off heavy sighs garden

glancing at the

Of Kadamba trees.

Rai, what makes You so?

You fear not the evil elderlies
What demi-god have You beheld?"
-(Paḍakalpaṭaru)

Srimati held the affectionate hand of Her dear friend and replied -

"Tender loveliness bubbles forth from the earth,
Surging waves of His smiles benumb Cupid.
Friend, Who is This paramour, whence did I behold,
My patience has gone afar.
Since then, my heart is anxious, why is it filled with tears?
He moves in frolic, body swaying in laughter,
Darting terrible arrows from sidelong glances.
The garland of Malati flowers swinging on His bosom,
Around which bumblebees hover and buzz.
The sparks of candan dots on His forehead strike the heart,
I am too ashamed to state what fever has gripped my heart.
Still my stone-heart continues to beat.
Govinda Dasa says – I Know not what will happen."

- (Padakalpataru)

The beauty of literature is not revealed everywhere. The language is the veil of literature. It is hidden in the pages, but everything is not concealed. "Still my stone-heart continues to beat" — Through this single statement what incomparable beauty of literature has been revealed and is making all lovers of literature relish this Rasa. The devotee is being requested to feel this at least once. In the same way, seeing is also of different types, such as seeing a picture, seeing in the dream etc.

Purvaraga Rasa is a subject of special research and relish for all practising devotees. Kṛṣṇa's Purvaraga is stimulating. As mentioned earlier, the practising devotee should partake of this nectar and relish this Rasa by equalizing with the Rasa experienced by the Gopis. Prior to actually beholding the Lord, even the devotees in <code>Dasya</code> mood experience a <code>Rasa</code> of anxiety because they have relished just a glimpse of the Lord in meditation or dreams. (Just as Gopakumara attained the condition of <code>Purvaraga</code> like the Gopis). This is a point to be noted.

MANA RASA (LOVERS' TIFFS)

Like Purvaraga Rasa, the relish of Mana Rasa is also plentiful and abundant.

"The zenith of Rasa is the 'Mana' of the Gopis in Braja."

-(C.C.)

If a river flowing with undaunted speed crashes into an obstacle, its water will swell and being unable to flow in a straight path will resort to numerous crooked courses. In the same way, the love of the Braja-gopis, which anyway flows in a crooked manner, becomes more crooked when confronted with the obstacle of Mana, branches into innumerable courses and the urges of love increase manifold. The definition of mana is given in U.N. thus—

"Dampatyor vibhava ekatra astoarpyanurakatyoh, svabhishauskesa vikasdi nirodhi mana ucyate."

Meaning – "The lover and the beloved are present in the same place, are attracted to each other, have the desire to see and embrace each other; yet all the feelings that pose an obstruction in achieving these aims are called 'Mana'. The Rasa of Mana lies in the fact that although these obstructions are apparently troublesome to the lover and the beloved, they ultimately increase love and makes love more and more novel every time. Mana has originated to make the course of love more Rasa-filled, gain more momentum and become more novel. Mana turns the old into new and makes an oft-relished thing gain the sweetness of novelty and hence more tempting. In the world of love, mana is a wonderful life-giving nectar, a miracle! Its administration makes the withered creeper of the heart blossom into flowers. It makes the frail crestfallen face sparkle like a mirror. It makes love more and more novel each moment. The lover becomes tempted to drink the nectar of the lotus-faced beloved just as a bumblebee tempted by nectar hovers around a lotus. He pleads the beloved hundreds of times to flash "the fine set of pearly teeth" in order to alleviate the darkness of despair in his heart. All glories to the nectarine compositions of the saint poet Jayadeva! In his poem 'Gita Govindam', the guilty lover (Lord Kṛṣṇa), seated at the feet of His sulking beloved (Śrīmati Rādhārāni) states -

"O my sweetheart! At least speak a few words with me. Then alone will the moonlight emitted by your pearly teeth be able to drive away the terrible darkness of my heart. Your moon-face is temptung me to drink the nectar of your lips. O vartuous one! Please be devoid of anger. Beholding you my heart is filled with passion. Please permit me to partake the nectar of your lotus face."

Ultimately the lover says – "dehipadapallavamudāram" (please place your tender feet on my head) and considers Himself fortunate after having bowed His head beneath the feet of His sulking beloved. The sugarcane is naturally sweet, but without the help of a machine, its juice cannot be extracted nicely. Similarly, maninī Śrīmatī Rādhā extracts the sweet Rasa from the very embodiment of unparallelled source of concentrated Rasa, Śrī Govinda, with the help of the machine of māna. This causes relish to all super rasika devotees. Factually the glories of māna are wonderful – Its potency to enhance sweetness indeed worthy of glorification. This is the very reason why Rūpa Goswāmi has defined māna thus –

"snehāstutkrstaat vyāptya māḍhurya- mānayanaavṃ, yo dhārayaṭyaḍaksinyaṃ sa maaṇ iṭi kīrṭyaṭe."

Meaning – "When affection attains excellence and lends novel sweetness, itself becoming crooked, it is called 'mana'."

Mana is of three types -

- (1) dhīra (cold)
- (2) adhīra (hot)
- (3) dhīrādhīrā (blow hot blow cold type)

THE ATTEMPTS OF A BELOVED SHOWING DHIRA MANA

"Dhīrāţu vakţi vakrokţya sotpRasam sagasam priyam"

-(U.N.Nayikābheda)

The following situation has been described in U.N. -

"Swāmin yukṭāmiḍaṃ tavañjana laavlakṭaḍravaih sarvaṭah sankranṭerdhṛṭanila lohiṭa ṭanoryaccanḍralekhāḍhṛṭih, ḍehārḍheaḍyiṭāṃ vāhan vahumaṭaṛṣi yannagaṭāh."

Meaning – "Having spent the night with Candravali, Kṛṣṇa has presented Himself before Radhārāni, early in the morning. Śrīmati perceives the signs of kohl on His body, stains of pan, marks of vermilion, bruises due to nails. Śrī Radhā realizes the behavior of the cheat very well and said sarcastically – 'Hey! I am seeing the blue and red form of Shiva. How well you have dressed up! O Paśupaṭi Siva)! Why have your not brought your consort Pārvaṭi? Had you done so, the picture would have been complete.' "

The devotees will definitely relish this statement of Dhira-beloved Rādhārāni. Description of the form of Syāmasundara who has indulged in conjugal sports with Candrāvali, as blue and red form of Śiva is an example of beautiful poetry. The body of Śyām is nicely colored with the kohl of the eyes of Candrāvali, her kisses have resulted in pān-stains, and the wounds inflicted by nails have caused māna in Śrī Rādhā. But, here She is dhīra – since She is using sweet sarcasm. 'Pasupaṭi' has dual meaning – 'Śiva' and 'the Lord of the animals'. The second meaning is synonymous with 'uncouth' or 'one who is devoid of higher tastes'. Due to constant association with cows, He seems to have become uncouth like the cows (just as the cows prefer to eat grass, leaves etc.). Srimafi said – "Why have you not brought your consort with you? Had you done so, I would have had the good fortune of seeing the blue and red form of Ardha-nariswara (Half-god half-woman).

"When the dhīra sees her lover coming from a distance, she goes away. If he comes near, she offers him a seat. Her heart is filled with anger, but sweet words spill forth from her lips. When her dear one embraces her, she returns the embrace. She behaves coolly, thereby nourishing her māna, or else she rejects her dear one with joyful words."

- (C.C. Madhya.14th ch.)

THE BELOVED SHOWING ADHĪRA MĀNA

"Adhira parusairavkyair niarsyedvalapbham rasa"

-(U.N. Nayikabheda)

Meaning - "The one showing adhira mana repels the lover with cruel words." For e.g. -

"Uṭṭungastanamandalīsahacarah kanthe sphuranneṣa te harah kāmsaripo kṣapavilasitam nihsamsayam saṃsaṭi, dhūrtābhiravaḍhu prataritamṛṭamaet miṭḥyā kaṭhāgharghari jhankaromukhara prayahi aṭRasa yukṭaṭranavasṭhiṭi."

-(U.N.)

Meaning – "O enemy of Kamsa! Go away. Do not speak any more lies. The cunning wives of herdsmen have destroyed you intelligence. The necklace that touches high-raised breasts, is now adorning you, thus giving away your indulgences at night. Do not try to conceal the rumble of thunderous truth with tinkling bells of falsehood."

rings and shackles him with garland."

- (C.C. Madhya.14th ch.)

THE BELOVED SHOWING DHIRADHIRA MANA

"Dhīrādhīrā tu vakroktya savaspam vadati priaym."

-(U.N. Nāyikābheda)

Such as -

"Gopendra nandaan na rodaya yahi ayhi sa te vidhasayti rusam hradyadhidevi, atnmaulimalahrta yavaka pankamasyah paaddvayam unaranena vibhusaaydya".

-(U.N.)

Meaning – (Rāḍhā who was in a piquant mood addressed Krsna thus)– "O Prince! You have millions of amorous sweethearts like me. Why should you be perturbed even if I die crying for you? Go away, do not stand there making me weep. If you are out of sight, I shall be able to forget you soon; but if you are near, it will be difficult to forget you. I would like to give you another sound advice – If your sweetheart learns that you are here, she will be most annoyed and then you will land into trouble. If you ask, "How would she know my whereabouts?" my answer is, "She is the Queen of your heart. So, she is eternally present there. Hence none of your actions shall remain unknown to her. Go and prostrate your head at the very feet whose Alakṭak has stained your crown."

"Dhiradhīrā taunts her lover using sarcastic words, sometimes glorifies sometimes criticizes and at other times she remains indifferent."

-(C.C. Madhya. 14th ch.)

be absorbed in such meditation and thus relish wonderful Rusa.

TYPES OF MANA

"So'aym sahetu-nirhetu bhedena dvividha matah."

- (U.N.Śrngārabheda)

Meaning - "Mana (sulking) is of two types -

- (1) saheţu (with cause)
- (2) nirheţu (without cause)"

Nirheţu māna disappears on its own while one has to resort to conciliatory speech, causing dissension, atonement, offering gifts, being submissive, indifference, change of mood, playing of the flute etc. to pacify saheţu māna. Release of tears, and laughter are the signs of alleviation of māna. The lovers relish their māna as the taste of warm sugarcane. Meaning, just as on chewing heated sugarcane, one feels warm along with the taste of sweetness, the conjugation at the end of māna has the mixed feeling of the previous pain, and pleasure due to embrace etc. Hence it is compared to the joy of relishing warm sugarcane.

"Behold Rāḍhā-Māḍhava locked in embrace,
At the end of māna, engaged in the war of passion,
As the chewing of warm sugarcane.
Beautiful as she is, shooting indifferent glances,
Showered joyous criticisms that pricked His heart.
Likewise the arrows of nails inflicted bruises,
Likewise she sprinkled the joys of a few kisses,
Causing exhilaration that crossed the limits of Rasa.
The lovers were submerged in the ocean of joy,
Poet Rāḍhā Mohan says "Thus their cherished desire was fulfilled"

- (Padakalpataru)

Anyhow, by hearing the sweet pastimes of mana, the devotees who wish to practise devotional service in manhura Rasa should

PREMAVAIĆITTA RASA

Premavaicitta is a type of Rasa in separation. Śrī Rūpa has described its characteristics in the following manner -

"Priyasya sannikarşe'pi premoţkaraş svabhāvaţah, ya viśleşa dhiyarţistat premavaicittyamucayţe."

-(U.N.Śrńgārabheda)

Meaning – "Since the beloved's love is extreme, although she close to her lover, she experiences the pangs of separation. This is called Premavaicitta."

A love that is full of thirst is the cause of constant dissatisfaction although the lovers may meet daily. For example, an extremely greedy Brahmin considers himself hungry even after gorging a huge meal and typhoid patient thirsts for more and more water in spite of having drunk large quantities of it. In the same way, the beloved feels the pangs of separation from her lover in spite of being with him. This stems from her insatiable love for Krsna, and this state is called 'Premavaićitta'.

Anurage kvacid buddhivrttestha suksmatvam syat aytha sa Śrī Kṛṣṇam taḍiyagunaganamadhuryanca yugapanna viseyi ākroţi yaṭah Śrī Kṛṣṇanubhave aṭḍanubhavah, Yaṭhā kacidaṭisukśam śuci vṣṭrāsyuṭavaṭisukśmam apyekam suṭrameva viḍhayṭi an ṭu sūṭra ḍavya sanḍhimiṭi, aṭṭhaiva sambhoāgkhye rase kānṭo'yam mām sambhunkṭe yasya suraṭalāmpatya vakacṭurya giṭavādyānrṭyaḍaṭo guṇa apāra iṭi guṇeṣu parviṣtāyām bvuḍḍhivrṭṭau kṣaṇanṭare ca yasya guṇa iḍṛṣah sa kva iṭi guṇānāpi ṭyakṭva tanmārgane praviṣta virahamevānubhāvayanṭi purasṭhiṭāmapi ṭāṇ na viṣayī karoṭiṭi jñeya."

Meaning - "Sometimes due to the extremeness of love, the intelligence of the beloved becomes so minute that She cannot perceive both Krsna and His sweet qualities simultaneously. When She perceives Kṛṣṇa, His qualities become oblivious to Her and when She realizes His qualities, Krsna Himself goes out of Her sight. Just as, if a needle has a minute hole, it is possible for only a single thread to pass through it and two strands of thread cannot enter it simultaneously; in the same way, when relishing the Rasa of copulation, the beloved thinks, `How wonderful! The lover who is enjoying with me possesses what wonderful skills in the art of lovemaking, what eloquence, what wonderful talents in the expertise of dance and music! In this way when her intellect is engrossed in her lover's sweet qualities, she is unable to perceive the subject of her love." Then, in spite of being on his lap, the beloved suffers the pangs of separation from her lover. This is a wonderful supernatural mystery in the kingdom of love.

The mahājanas have sung — "Sitting close to the king of rasikas, the Rasa-filled Rāḍhā let out sighs of lamentation — `shall I ever get the Rasa-filled Syām? When shall I cross the ocean of separation? Radha was unable to perceive the near one, although Her friends tried to make Her believe so. Then Kṛṣṇa did enfold Her in His lap. Beholding this Govinda dās was submerged in joy". (Padakalpaṭaru)

Now we shall briefly describe the Rasa of separation called pravasa'.

PRAVĀSA RASA

"pūrvā sangāṭ ayoryunor bhaveḍ eṣānṭarāḍibhih vyāvaḍhānastu yaṭpragñyaih sa pravāsa iṭiryaṭe". - [U. N Śṛṅgārabheḍa] Pravāsa is of two types – buḍḍhipūrvaka and abuḍḍhipūrvaka. The voluntary pravāsa for the pleasure of some devotee is called buḍḍhipūrvaka and the involuntary change of place or country is called abuḍḍhipūrvaka.

Buddhipurvaka (voluntary) pravasa is again of two types -

- (1) short distance
- (2) long distance

When Kṛṣṇa takes the cows for grazing, it is short – distance pravāsa and going to Maṭhurā is long – distance pravāsa. The estranged couple shows ten symptoms viz., – "anxiety, insomnia, tension, paleness, delirium, madness, illness, fainting, death (almost dead). An example of each state is given in Śṛṅgārabheda in Ujjwala Nilamani.

We have already learnt that Rasa exists in separation. In the love of Brajavāsis, one finds a lot of constant separation. It is estrangement that makes their love so supreme and great. It is only the Brajavāsis who can relish the supreme importance and deliciousness of love arising out of estrangement from Kṛṣṇa. Although all devotees show the signs of separation due to the inability to obtain the Supreme Being, we do not feel the same pangs of separation as the Brajavāsis, due to lack of intense love. Hence one cannot attain the same supreme joy as the Brajavāsis either.

Amongst the Brajavāsis the supremely love – filled consorts in Maḍhura Rasa show even greater viraha. Whether in union, or in separation, there is no end to their viraha. Even when they are united with Kṛṣṇa, due to the obstacles of Parakīyā – Rasa, their heart is always fearful of separation in the future. Hence they constantly relish viraha – Rasa. Remembering their love, some emotional poet has sung –

"you have sounded great pains in my heart".

This pain is most relishing, sweet and filled with Rasa. The ancient rsis say –

"sangama viraha vikalpe varāmiha viraho na sangamastasyah, sange saiva ṭaṭhaika tribhuvana mapi tanmayam virahe".

Meaning – "of union and separation, it is separation that is superior, since during union, one gets the dear one alone, while in separation the entire universe gets filled with the dear one, that is, one sees the sweetheart everywhere".

An emotional poet has sung the feelings of a sweetheart –

"If you love me, dear friend, remain far, let me not see you.

It feels nice from far, since then the world is lit up with your smiles;

Your restless eyes are filled with nectar.

Please love me from afar, Even the moon is not sweet when near. Love is not luxury at all times, friend, for, distant love has a silver lining"

In union, although there is more involvement of the sense of sight etc., there is not much involvement of the mind. In separation, although there is no deep involvement of eyes etc., there is deep involvement of the heart, and because of deep involvement of the heart, one can relish Kṛṣṇa, the embodiment of Rasa, in innumerable special ways.

viraha - Rasa called pravāsa -

- (1) when Krsna had left for Mathura with Akrura and
- (2) Uddhava had arrived at Braja.

Please refer to the conversation with Uddhava, (Bhāg.10.47) Bhramara Gītā, which is the lamentation of Śrīmaţi Rādhārāni, the crest – jewel of all the consorts of Kṛṣṇa. It is the most supremely relishing part of Śrimaḍ Bhāgavaṭam. Rūpa Gosvāmi has given a very touching description of pravāsa viraha in his dramas, Laliṭā Māḍhava, Uḍḍhava- sanḍeśa, and Haṃsaḍūṭa. Appreciating readers will be able to greatly relish the pravāsa Rasa in these books – if we try to do so here, our attempts will be futile. A loving picture of pravāsa Rasa has been drawn by a mahājana –

"New flowers have blossomed, woods have transformed into flower - beds. cuckoos are singing sweet songs. Cool mountain - breeze has arrived. but the lover has not returned to his homeland. The fragrant moonlight fires the body as do the humming bees in the garden. It is spring - time, my paramour is in a far away land, my fate is unfavorable, I know. I wish to see the face of Kṛṣṇa unblinkingly, with eyes that are never satisfied. In these joyous moments what trouble I face, poor and hard - hearted as I am. Each day I wither just as a lotus in winter I know not what will happen. Says Vidyāpati - "Shame on this life, Mādhava is too heartless".

Here, Kṛṣṇa, who has departed to Maṭhurā is the subject. The love - sick Rādhā is the object of love. Along with Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa, the breeze, humming of bees, memories of moonlit nights are the excitant causes of love. Loud wailing, indifference to what people may say, are the activities. Tears, horripilations and paleness are silent activities. Grief, humility, curiosity, madness, swooning etc. nourish the passion in the mood of sweetness and culminate to form pravāsa – Rasa in the mellow of separation.

Mahāprabhu was the very embodiment of the Rasa of separation, He attained various conditions of bhava while relishing this pravasa Rasa in the Gambhira pastimes. During the last twelve years the Lord constantly experienced the exhilaration of viraha from Kṛṣṇa. The Lord expressed the reactions of Radharani on seeing Uddhava, all day and night. He was always in a state of madness arising due to viraha. He was always in delusion and spoke in delirium. Blood oozed out of the pores of His skin, His teeth shook, and in one moment His body became thin while in the next moment it swelled. In Gambhīrā, He did not sleep a wink. He rubbed his head and face on the walls and injured himself. The Lord went out through three locked doors. Sometimes He fell near the main gate and sometimes into the sea. He mistook the Cataka hill as the Govardhan Mountain and ran crying towards it. Whenever He saw a garden, He would mistake it for Vṛnḍāban. He would go, sing and dance there and eventually faint.

"`What can I do, where can I get the son of the King of Braja? Where is the flute-player, the Lord of my life? In whom shall I confide my grief? My heart breaks in the absence of Kṛṣṇa.` In this way he lamented overwhelmingly. " — [CC. Madhya. 2nd ch]

The Rasa of union or copulation is the other facet of srngara. Its characteristics are described in Ujvala – Nîlamani as follows-

" darsanālinganādināmanukulayanniṣe vāya, sunorullāsamarohan bhavah sambhoga iryaṭe".

Meaning – "When the lover and beloved see each other, embrace, speak and touch, they give joy to each other. This mood of exultation is called `sambhoga'. Sambhoga is of two types -

- (1) primary
- (2) secondary

Primary sambhoga can be further classified into four. They are as follows -

- (a) short after purvaraga
- (b) `narrow' after mana
- (c) 'fulfilled' after long-distance pravasa

Meeting in dreams is called 'secondary sambhoga'. The dreams of Brajasundaris are not caused by the modes of passion, but rather by the beauty of luxurious love. The characteristics of sambhoga – Rasa are as follows – seeing, speaking, touching, obstructing the way, Rasa – dance, the sports of Vṛnḍāban, water-sports in Yamunā, enjoyment in the boat, tax-paying pastime, drinking nectar, false sleep, playing dice, kissing, embracing, drinking the nectar of each other's lips, intercourse etc. Please refer the examples of each characteristic in the description of sambhoga – Rasa in Śrngārabheḍa of Ujvala-Nilamani.

A poem of dalliance goes like this -

"Both were submerged in Rasa, being struck by the five arrows of cupid, they indulged in the sports of love.

On gaining consciousness they discovered themselves in each other's arms.

On kissing they again lost consciousness.

Filled with extreme exultation and perspiration, they gazed unblinkingly, tears flowing constantly. Shivering, they spoke with emotion-choked voice. What exultation they felt on touching each other!

They were thrilled in each other's company.

Who can express the waves of love felt by them?

When will poet Radha Mohan Das behold such scene?"

In this poem all the ingredients of sambhoga-rasa are present. Krsna is the subject of love, Rāḍhārāni is the object of love, seeing and touching one another – (what exultation on touching each other!) are the excitant causes.

Glancing, soft and sweet smiles are the activities. Tears, shivering, rapture, choked voice are silent activities. Joy, pride, delight, bashfulness are the passing moods. Together they nourish the permanent mood of Madhura – rați, thereby making it the most relishing Rasa called sambhoga śrngara – Rasa.

According to Rupa Gosvami, the joy of pastimes is higher than intercourse. Jiva Gosvami has also written in Prītisandarbha –

"vidagahananțu yațha vanițanuragasvadane vancha na tuluu tatsparșadavapi".

Meaning -" The connoisseurs of Rasa wish to relish the moods of their beloved more than kissing, embracing etc."

Rūpa Gosvāmi has called the union after long – distance pravāsa as prosperous. While describing it, he has not mentioned kissing, embracing etc. In prosperous sambhoga Rusa the beloved speaks as follows -

Dear friend, how do I express the joy I felt? All the time Mādhava was in my temple. What sorrow that sinful one inflicted on me, That much joy did I get on beholding Hari.

Even if I am given a basket of priceless gems, I shall not send my beloved to far away land.

Sweetheart is my blanket in winter,

And a soft cotton – pillow,

He is my umbrella in monsoon,

And a boat in the ocean.

Poet Vidyapați says - "Listen my good damsel, good people have never to suffer long".

In this poem , " I became equally happy on beholding Hari'' draws the picture of $R\overline{a}dha-M\overline{a}dhava$ looking at each other unblinkingly.

RASA OF LOVE AND ŚŖŇĢĀRA

Śripada Karnapura has shown a little difference in the Rasa of love (prema) and śrngara – Rasa, (Rasa of love – making).

"premarase sarveRasa antarbhavanțisarve Rasasca bhāvasca taranga iva vāridhau" - (Alankāra Kaustubha 5.12)

Meaning - "In prema-Rasa, all Rasas are existent. Just as the waves of the sea are part of the sea, all the Rasas are included in prema - Rasa". According to him, sṛṇgāra Rasa is a part of prema Rasa. In this context, he has also mentioned a difference of opinion. Viz. -

"kesancinmaţe Śrī kṛṣṇayoh śṛṇgāra eva Rasah, tanmaţepyeṭadudaharanam nāsangaṭam śṛṇgārongi premangam angasyāpi koacidudrikţaţā".

-(AlankaraKaustubha 5.12)

Meaning – "According to some, whenever we speak of Rasa in the context of Radha and Kṛṣṇa, it refers to śṛṇgāra Rasa only. This opinion states that prema – Rasa is a part of srngara - Rasa."

Even if we accept this opinion, our statement still remains justified, since in rare cases, the part becomes more important than the whole. Then there are some that do not like this part and whole business in prema and sṛṇṇāra. The love of the Gopis is totally devoid of the desire of sense gratification and is filled with the sole desire of giving pleasure to Kṛṣṇa. Hence prema and śṛṇṇāra have attained oneness. Here the two are inseparable. We are not aware whether Rupa Gosvami and Jiva Gosvami have clearly described śṛṇṇāra – Rasa and prema – Rasa as part and whole. In hearing and glorifying sambhoga – Rasa also, the interested devotees will please relish the Rasa of union as mentioned earlier.

We have spoken briefly about the splendor of the singara - Rasa of the Gopis. So far we have spoken of nearly all the moods of the beloved. In Sinmad Bhagavatam one finds a lot of description of the moods of the beloved. Although in Braja there are innumerable beloved filled with Madhura - Rasa, Sinmati Radharani is the crest jewel of all the beloved.

SRI RADHA TATVA OR REALITY OF SRI RADHA

Śri Śukamuni has glorified the greatness of Rādhārāni's love amongst all the damsels of Braja in the verse "anayā ārādhito nunam" etc. (Bhag 10.30.28). Some people are reluctant to accept the greatness of Rādhā's love, since Her name is not mentioned in Śrīmaḍ Bhāgavaṭam. Śrī Śukaḍev Gosvami has not mentioned the name of any Gopī. In his purport to verses such as "ityunmaṭṭa vāco gopyāh" etc (Bhag 10.30.14), Śrila Viśvanāṭha has said-

"no nah kathā vada sadhsviţi tannisiddho'pyānanda nighna ihu tu yadavoćameva, namani tu prathāyiṭasmi tadaṭra nāsamiṭṭhaṃ munirmanasi sampraṭi niścikaya".

Meaning - "When Sukadev was about to describe the mysterious pastimes of the Gopis in the assembly of Emperor Pariksit, the Gopis inspired him not to reveal their names in the assembly. On receiving the prohibitory order of the Gopis, Sukadev was emerged in the ocean of bliss and in spite of describing their pastimes very nicely he has not mentioned their names. In not doing so, he has merely executed their command".

Sanāṭana Gosvāmi has stated in his explanation to the verse "anayaraḍhito nunaṃ" that, benumbed by bliss, Sukaḍev has revealed the name of Rāḍhārāni covertly. In his explanation he expresses his opinion thus – "yāṭi a yaṭiṭi rāḍheṭi nām – kāraṇanca darsiṭam". Anyway, whether Sukaḍev mentions the name of Rāḍhāt or not, there is no doubt that in the description of Rāsalīlā, amidst innumerable Gopis, he has waved the victory – banner of the supreme love of one certain principal Gopi. That principal Gopi is none other than Śri Rāḍhāt, the crest-jewel of all the consorts of Kṛṣṇa. Many srutis, puranas and tantras extol the greatness of Rāḍhārāṇi.

"Tasyadya prakṛṭi Rādhikā niṭya nirguṇa yasyaṃśe Lakśmidurgādikā sakṭayah". - (Gopālaṭāpaniśruti)

Meaning - "Sri Rādhā is the original potency of the Supreme Being. She is eternal. Lakśmi, Durgā etc. are only Her parts. Just as in spite of being the supreme reality, Kṛṣṇa is the cause of all causes, similarly, although Śri Rādhā is the supreme potency, She is the supreme cause of all other potencies."

"Rukmini dvaravatyantu radha vrndavane vane"- (matsya purana)

Meaning - "Just as Rukmini is the chief of all queens in Dvārakā, Rādhā is the chief consort in Vrndāban."

Padmapurana says -

"yatha priya Radha visnostasyah kundam priuam tatha sarvagopisu sevaika visnoratyanta vallabha".

Meaning - "As Radha is dear to Kṛṣṇa, the lake in which She bathes is also equally dear to Him".

Amongst all the Gopis, Radha is the dearest to Krsna.

"yā mādhavo devo mādhavenaiva rādhikā janesvavibhrajanṭe" - (Ŗkpariśiṣta).

Meaning – " Rāḍhā with Māḍhava and Māḍhava with Rāḍhā are eternally and inseparably existent amongst the populace."

Nārada pancarātra and Gautamiya ṭanṭra have repeatedly described Sri Rādhā as the supreme potency in the following words-

"Laksmi sarasvaţi durga saviţri radhika para", "Devi para prokţu caturvarga pRasavini", "rasika rasikananda svayam rasesvari para", "Devi krsnamayi prokţa radhika paradevaţa / sarvalaksmimayi sarvakantih sammohini para" etc. "paranţe sresthavacaka".

Please note that the word 'para' exists in all these verses . 'para' means 'supreme'. In this way, there are plenty of evidences of Śrī Rāḍhā being the Supreme amongst all other potencies.

In Śri Ćaitanya Ćariṭāmṛṭa it has been described thus -

"The consorts of Lord Kṛṣṇa are of three types – the Laksmis (in Vaikuntha), the queens (in Dwaraka) and the Braja-beauties. Amongst these, the damsels of Braja are superior. Śri Rādhikā is the source of all the consorts. The Laksmis are her vaibhava-vilasa while the queens are her vaibhava-prakasa. The damsels of Braja are Her expansions. They all have different forms and nature in order to give pleasure to Kṛṣṇa. The exultation of Rasa is not possible without many damsels. Hence there are many forms to make the pastimes more attractive. Moreover, they have different types of bhāvas and Rasas for the pleasure of Kṛṣṇa. They make the pastimes such as Rāsa-līlā more relishing to Kṛṣṇa. Rādhārāṇi enchants Govinda (Kṛṣṇa) and causes pleasure to Govinda. She is Govinda's life and soul. She is the chief of all consorts."

-(C.C Adi-lila, 4th chapter)

Sri Rāḍhā is the crest - jewel of all the consorts of Kṛṣṇa. It can also be told that Śri Rāḍhā is the be-all and end-all of Kṛṣṇa's pastimes. Raghunāṭha Dās Gosvāmi has written in his Visākhānanḍaḍ stoṭra -

"kṛṣṇamanjula tapinche vilasat svarnayuthikā, govinda navyopathode sthiravidyullatādbhuta, griṣme govinda – sarvange candra – candana – candrika, site syamasubhangeṣu pitapatta – lasat pati, madhau Kṛṣṇa tarultase madhusrirmadhurākṛtih, manjumallārarāgasrih pravṛṣi syamaharṣini, ṛṭau saradi Rasaika – rasikendramiha sphutaṃ / varitum hantā Rasasriviharanti sakhisrita hemante smarayuddhārthamatantaṃ rajanandanaṃ, pauruṣeṇa parajetum jayasrirmurtidhāriṇi".

Meaning – "Sri Rāḍhārāṇi is the golden creeper embracing the Kṛṣṇa – Tamāla tree. In the blazing heat of summer, She is the sandalwood – paste, camphor and cool moonlight on the body of Syām. In winter, She is the golden – yellow warm clothing on His auspicious body. In spring Śri Rāḍhā is the sweetly scented vernal beauty bringing exultation to the Kṛṣṇa tree. In monsoon Śri Rāḍhā is the manjumallār musical notes playing in the showers of Kṛṣṇa. In the autumn, She is the embodiment of the beauty of Rasa, lending joy to the diadem of the kings of connoisseurs (Kṛṣṇa). In the dewy season, She is the embodiment of victory, causing defeat to the scion of the King of Braja (Kṛṣṇa) desiring a duel in the art of love - making".

"He resembles a newly – formed cloud, She – a static lightning.

> He glows like on emerald, She – like golden arrows.

He is the king of heady honey – bees, She – a newly bloomed lotus.

He is like a young Tamala tree, She - a golden creeper.

He is moon – faced, She gazes like a tempted cakora."

- (Padakalpataru)

Just as Lord Krsna is the form of unparalleled sweetness, Sri $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$ is also the supreme essence of love.

"Mahābhāva or supreme ecstasy is the highest essence of love. The embodiment of that mahābhāva is Śri Rāḍhā. She is the embodiment of love, She is ever-flowing with love; She is famous as the greatest of all beloved of Kṛṣṇa"

- [CC.Madhya 8th ch]

(N.B. - Please refer to the detailed description of the form of Srī Rāḍhā's love in "premāmbhoja maranḍākhya sṭava" of Raghunatha Das Gosvami and 8th chapter of Maḍhyalila, Ćaiṭanya Ćariṭāmṛṭa by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmi.)

Immersed in the nectar of supreme ecstasy of Śrī Rādhā, Śrī Kṛṣṇa Ćaiṭanya Mahāprabhu has expressed unique Divine madness in the great pastimes of Gambhūrā and has declared the supreme greatness of the love of Śrī Rādhā to his confidential devotees. Sri Kaviraj Gosvānū, the expert artist of prema Rasa has unraveled the brilliant greatness of the love of Śrī Rāḍhā for the loving devotees by perfectly drawing the image of that supremely sweet and ecstatic pastime in the Antya Līlā of Caitanya Caritāmṛṭa. Hence the mahājana has sung –

"If Gour had not been , how would I have lived? How would the world know of Rādhā's glories and Rādhā's love?

How would we enter the sweet pastimes in the sweet gardens of Vṛnḍāban?
Who else could have expressed the feelings of the damsels of Braja?"

PRACTISE OF DEVOTIONAL SERVICE IN THE MANIARI BHAVA

Practise of devotional service in the 'MANJARI BHĀVA', that is, in the mode of single – minded servitude to Śrī Rāḍhā, the chief consort of Kṛṣṇa, is the special hitherto unoffered, generous contribution of Śrī Mahāprabhu in this dark age of Kali. We have said that in Śrīmaḍ Bhāgavaṭam there is large description of the moods of the beloved. This does not mean that there is no description of the love of a female friend (sakhi – Prem) at all. In the purport to verses such as "apyena paṭnyupagaṭāh" (Bhag. 10.30.11), Jīva Gosvāmī has written –

"aṭra khandasya vakyasya nikhilapaḍanamapyanumoḍana vyanjaka evarṭha praṭipaḍyaṭe / ṭaṭah sakhyamevasam tanmiṭhunamanulakshyaṭe ṭaḍḍarśanoṭkantha ca ṭaṭra vakyarṭhah".

Meaning - "All the words of this verse are suggestive of approval. We should understand that \hat{Sri} $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$'s friends are anxious to see both $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$ and Krsna. Hence they are inquiring about them from the does".

Kamarupa Bhakti is of two types -

- (1) sambhogeććhāmayī
- (2) tadbhavećchatmika.

"Kelitatparyavatyeva sambhogećchāmayī bhāvet, taḍbhāvecchāṭmikā tāṣām bhāvamāḍhurya kāmiṭā".

- [B.R.S. 1.2.299]

Meaning - "Sambhogecchāmayi is the mood of a beloved while taḍbhāvecchāṭmikā is the mood of a sakhi."

Sakhī is of five types, manjarī being one of them. They are always ready to serve . Service is their soul.

THE PRESENCE OF MANJARIS IN RASA-LILA

Whether the mañjaris were present during raslila cannot be confirmed. There is a mention of 'attendants' in the description of Rasa by the poet Karnapur in his book Ananda Vṛndāban campu, Rūpa Gosvāmi has written in the 42nd hymn in Sri Utkallikā Vallarī –

"Rasarambhe vilasaţi pariţyajya gostambujākśivṛndam vṛndāvanābhūvi rahah keśavopaniya / tvāṃ svādhina priyaṭāmapada prapanenarciṭangiṃ dūre dṛṣtvā hṛḍi kimacirādarpayiśyāmi darpam".

Meaning – "Dear Śrimati Rādhika! When the Rasa sport starts in Vṛṇḍāban, deserting all other damsels of Vṛṇḍa, Kṛṣṇa will take You to a secluded place and being submissive to You, He will decorate Your hair with various flowers. Beholding this scene from far, when will my heart overflow with transcendental bliss?" This is suggestive of the presence of manjarīs during Rāsalīlā.

The ones whose sole purpose of living is to relish the nectar of union of $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$ — Govinda— they who forget themselves in the joy of bringing about the union of $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$ and Krsna— those friends of $Sr\bar{i}$ $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$ are classified as 'samasnehā' (equal in affection) and 'asamasnehā' (not equal in affection).

Samasneha - Those who have equal affection for both Radha and Kṛṣṇa viz., Lalitā, and Visākhā, are called `samasnehā'.

Asamasnehā - They are those friends who have unequal love for Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. They are further classified into two types -

- (1) those who have greater affection for Kṛṣṇa (Kṛṣṇasnehādhikā) and
- (2) those who have greater affection for Radha (Rādhāsnehādhikā).

Dhanistha etc. have greater affection for Kṛṣṇa. Hence one does not execute devotional service under their allegiance. Sakhis such as Rūpamanjarī who possess more affection for Rādhā are designated as "manjarīs". Rupa Gosvāmi has named their permanent mood as "bhāvollāsā raṭi" (passion filled with the mood of exultation).

THE PERMANENT MOOD OF MANJARIS - BHAVOLLASA RATI

"sańcari syat samana va kṛṣṇaraṭyah suhṛḍraṭih / aḍhika puṣyamana cedbhāvollāsā iṭiryaṭe". - (U.N)

Meaning - "Devotees having similar desires naturally have friendly feelings towards each other".

Hence the raţi that Sakhās such as Laliţa possess towards Raḍhā is called `friendly' rati. If this friendliness to Rāḍhā is equal to or little less than the passion towards Kṛṣṇa, it will be called a `passing' raṭi, meaning that this friendliness will only be like waves in the ocean of the permanent passion towards Kṛṣṇa. But if the friendliness towards Rāḍhā is greater than the passion for Kṛṣṇa, then it will gain supreme specialty in Maḍhura Rasa and be designated as `bhāvollāsā raṭi' (state of exultation) and this is the permanent state of the manjarīs who have greater affection for Rāḍhā and their passion for Kṛṣṇa is secondary.

In relishing the nectar of joyful service to $R\overline{a}dh\overline{a}$ – Govinda, their position is the highest. Although they belong to the class of Sakhis, they are superior to the Sakhis due to their single – minded service. They are also considered superior to the Sakhis because unlike the Sakhis, who sometimes on being approached by Rādhā, accept a physical relation with Kṛṣṇa, the mānjarīs never ever desire the joy of physical proximity to Kṛṣṇa, even in their dreams, their mental state being ever so pure. Even if Kṛṣṇa requests them or their chieftain Rādhārāni Herself may eagerly approach them, they do not relent.

THE MANJARIS ARE SUPERIOR TO SAKHIS

"Ananya śripadakamala aṣyaika Rasadhirhareh sangerangam svapansamayenāpi dadhaṭi / balāṭ kṛṣṇe kurpāsakabhiḍi kimāpyaćaraṭi kapyadaśrurme veṭi pralāpaṭi mamāṭma ća hāsaṭi" – (Vṛṇḍāvan mahimāmṛṭa – 16.74)

Meaning – "Those who serve the lotus – feet of Rāḍhā – Kṛṣṇa single – mindedly, do not accept dalliance with Kṛṣṇa even in dreams, they tearfully lament and refuse if Kṛṣṇa tears their bodice etc. while my life and soul Śrī Rāḍhā laughingly looks on".

From this laughter, it is understood that Rāḍhā approves of such behavior of Kṛṣṇa. Actually Rāḍha-Kṛṣṇa show such attitude to test the feelings and loyalty of the mañjarīs. Kṛṣṇa never desires physical relation with mañjarīs. Śri Viśvanāṭha has stated the reason for this in his Ānanḍaćanḍrikā purport to the 9th verse of nayāka sahāya bheḍa of Ujval Nilamaṇi – kadācit śrīkrṣṇa angasangospṛhavaṭyopi bhavanṭi, ṭāśca laliṭāḍyāh parama preṣtasakhyāḍayāh / uṭṭarāsṭu ṭaḍḍvayaṭāvaṭ kaḍāpi kṛṣṇāngasangospṛhavaṭyo na bhavanṭi / taśca kasturya ḍayā niṭyasakhyayh".

"aṭra sakhībhāvam samāsriṭa iṭi yadyāpi sakhyo hi sva sva yaṭhesvarinaṃ śrīḍināmeva śrīkṛṣṇānga sanga sukhena sukhinyah na ṭu sveṣāṃ ṭaḍāpi ṭah samanyaṭo dviḍhā bhavanṭi prema-saunḍaryu vaiḍagḍhya aḍināṃ aḍhikyena śrīkṛṣṇasyāṭi labhaniyagaṭryah ṭeṣāṃ nyūna ṭvena ṭasyan aṭi lobhāniyagaṭryaśća / ṭaṭra purva śrīkṛṣṇa sukhānuroḍhaṭ ṭaṭa eva sva yuṭhesvarīnām apy āgrahāḍhikacca

Meaning - "Although the Sakhūs are joyful when their group leader Rādhā enjoys bodily pleasure with Kṛṣṇa, they are classified into two types - firstly, the physical companions who are very much tempting to Kṛṣṇa due to excess love, beauty and wit. When their group - leader Rādhā eagerly approaches them to give pleasure to Kṛṣṇa, sometime they do tend to partake of such pleasure, e.g. sakhūs such as Laliṭā. Secondly, those Sakhūs who are not physical companions or very much tempting to Kṛṣṇa due to slight lack in love, beauty etc. Although Kṛṣṇa and their own group - leader Rādhārānī approach them with great eagerness, they do not relent to the joy of having physical relationship with Kṛṣṇa. They are the mañjarīs such as Kasṭuri etc."

Here a fine point worthy of attention is that, the Gosvāmis such as Śrī Rupamanjari have thus described the physical beauty of the servants of Radha - "The splendor of their lotus - feet defeat even the dazzling brilliance of lightning". Yet Sri Visvanatha has mentioned that the manjaris lack in physical beauty as compared to the Sakhis. The inner meaning, we feel is that Krsna is tempted to accept the service of love from the devotees according to the type and extent of their love. This is the self evident characteristic of love, the propensity of Kṛṣṇa's original potency. On eagerly being approached by Rādhā, the Sakhis such as Lalita feel a longing to associate physically with Krsna. Hence Kṛṣṇa too is tempted to accept their bodily service. But, due to some inexpressible purity of the heart, the manjaris never desire the physical proximity of Krsna even in their dreams. This is the secret behind the expression "not-sotempting". This is the deficiency of their physical beauty. In reality, they do not lack physical beauty.

Maybe this is why Viśvanāṭh Cakravarṭipāḍ has added the word love' before beauty and wit. Factually, they are not deficient in love. That is why they are able to obtain some such things that are beyond the reach of even Sakhīs such as Laliṭā, viz. –

THE MANJARIS POSSESS THE EXTRAORDINARY FORTUNE TO SERVE

"tambula arpana padamardan Payodanabhişaradibhir vrndaranyamahesvarim priyataya astosayanti priyah / prana presthasakhikuladapi kilasankocita bhumikah kelibhumisu rupamanjarimukhastadasikah samsraye"

- (Vrajavilasa stava - 38)

Meaning – "I seek refuge of those maid – servants of Śrī Rāḍlīā, headed by Śrī Rūpa Manjarī, who constantly satisfy Śrī Vṛṇḍāvaneśwarī (Rāḍlīā) by offering betel – leaf, massaging the feet, offering water and arranging meetings of the two lovers, those who have obtained unrestrained rights to frequent the place of love – sports of Rādlīā – Kṛṣṇa".

Practising devotional service in their allegiance is the teaching of Mahāprabhu and His followers such as Rūpa and Sanāṭana Gosvāmi. Raghunāṭha Dās Gosvāmi has prayed -

"padābjayostava binā varādāsyāmeva nanyāt kadāpi samaye kildevi yāće / sakhyāya te mama namostu namostu nityam dāsyaya te mama rasostu rasostu satyam".

-(Vilāpa kusumānjali - 16)

Meaning - "O Goddess! I seek nothing other than the mercy of Your lotus - feet. I pay obeisance to Your friendship. But I yearn for the position of Your servant".

This servitude to $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$ is the special mercy of $\hat{S}r\bar{i}$ Goursundar. Sanāṭan Gosvāmi has called it the most extraordinary and supremely great task to be accomplished. In the realm of love, there is no higher obtainable thing than this for the conditioned soul. Sri Narottama Das Thakura has prayed -

"Rādhā - Kṛṣṇa is my life and soul. I have no refuge other than them in life or death. Amidst the Kadamba trees, on the banks of Kālindi, I will seat the two of them on a gem - studded altar. I shall apply fragrant sandalwood on the dark and fair forms. When shall I fan them, my gaze being transfixed on their moon-faces? I shall garland them with Mālaṭi flowers and offer their lips betel - leaves containing camphor".

Then again ----

"Surrounded by Sakhis, signaled by Rāḍhikā, holding a comb, I shall spread Her hair and comb Her curly locks, styling them in beautiful chignon. I shall apply musk and canḍan all over Her body, and adorn Her with attractive necklace; I shall draw tilaka with canḍan and kumkum, and behold Her nectarine face. I shall carefully drape Her with blue silk, and bedeck Her feet with bejeweled anklets; I shall wash Her rosy feet with water and wipe them with my tresses. Arranging a bed of lotus – petals I shall put them to sleep; fanning softly with a fly – brush on their love – worn bodies".

THE SECRET OF DEVOTIONAL PRACTISE OF THE GAUDIYA VAISNAVAS

In Gaudiya Vaiṣṇavism, when one takes refuge of the feet of a sadguru, the faithful devotee is introduced to his manjari—self who is a maid of Śrī Rāḍhā. Thereafter, along with hearing and chanting, he has to constantly meditate on his true self and be absorbed in rendering devotional service mentally, throughout the day according to the instructions of the Gosvāmis. Like this, hearing, chanting and following the principles of good conduct in this external material body while meditating on devotional service rendered to Rādhā—Kṛṣṇa in the spiritual form should go on simultaneously.

"Devotional practise is of two types – external and internal One should hear and chant in the external material body, while one should serve $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$ -Krsna in Vraja, all day and night by meditating on one's spiritual body"

(CC)

Then there is one more secret. The devotee is introduced to his identity of a young boy in service to Srī Mahāprabhu in His pastimes at Nabadwip. The same devotee renders devotional service simultaneously in both the pastimes (Nabadwip and Vrndavan). He thus obtains the great fortune of relishing perfect sweetness in the realm of love. He meditates on the service rendered to Mahaprabhu. When Mahaprabhu, absorbed in the hymns sung by Svarupa Gosvāmi becomes engrossed in relishing the nectar of Vrndavan in the mood of Radharani, and His associates are also engrossed in relishing the nectar of Vraja according to their own moods, then the devotee too gets absorbed in rendering devotional service to Govinda in Vraja in his original form of a Manjari. In this way, devotional practise continues in two spiritual forms. Due to very deep meditation the devotee gives up paying profound attention to his material body and gradually becomes absorbed in his twin spiritual forms. On attaining success in devotional practise, the devotee is awarded the crowning glory by offering him the right to render twin devotional service in both the pastimes in his spiritual forms as meditated by him, at the time of his death. Narottama dasa Thakur has said - "Here I shall get Gouracandra and there -Radha-Krsna". In devotional practise, this is the highest point of spiritual psychology and it is the highest mellow in the soul of a devotee. This is the maximum extent to which the marginal potency of the Lord (Jiva - Shakti) can progress in the realm of spiritualism. "sa kastha sa paragatih". Meaning -"It is the zenith of spiritual state".

To practise devotion in the mood of a manjari is the very deep secret of Gaudiya Vaisnavism. To worship in the mode of a Gopi has been mentioned in ancient puranas, tantras and many wise saints have described it in texts that belong to the pre-Caitanya period. Sathakopaćarya has mentioned worshiping in the mood of a Gopi in Patala Khanda of Padma purana, Rudrayāmal Tantra and Sahasragīti. Ācārya Nimbārk Svāmi has spoken of Radha - worship. We find worshiping in the mood of sakhi in the descriptions of great saint poets such as Jaydev, Candidas, Vidyapaţi etc. But from the above-mentioned texts we do not get a clear idea of the characteristics of the maniaris or the maids who possess more affection for Śrī Rādhā. There is no very definite layout about devotional practise in the mood of a manjari in these texts. This is the novel discovery of the followers of the lotus -feet of Sri Caitanya, such as Sri Rupa and Sanatana. Srila Rupa Gosvami has endlessly and specially described the Madhura - Rasa of the Braja - beauties who are the highest resort of splendent Rasa in Ujvala - Nīlamani wherein he has described those incidents that are beyond the scope of BhaktiRasamrta sindhu. Here he has given clear indication of the characteristics of the Manjaris as well as devotional practise in the mood of manjari. The Gosvamis such as Rupa and Sanatana are the eternal manjaris of Braja - "Twin splendent bodies". They have descended in the age of Kali as associates of Goursundar, the united form of Radha - Krsna and have unraveled the secret of devotional practise in the mood of manjari in their texts for the welfare of mankind. Stavamālā by Rupa Gosvami, Stavavali by Raghunatha Das Gosvami, Samkalpakalpadrum by Visvanath Cakravarti, PremaBhakti Candrika and Prarthana by Narottam Das Thakur are overflowing with transcendental mellow of the Manjaris. By relishing these texts, connoisseur devotees will find equanimity with their own Manjari - bhava and they will feel blessed to relish the nectar of the Divine couple.

The practising devotee who wishes to relish Rasa and is yearning to obtain the mood of a Manjari should follow this process -

(1) vipralambha Rasa (the Rasa of separation) – at the end of mid – day pastime at Radha-kunda –

"hṛḍaya - ḍayiṭalila - snigḍhāḍugdḥaih prapurṇṇ ṭanu - kanakaghāṭi sā subhruvosyah sakhinām / nayanāmuḍāmṭaniṭ sāsu vairasyamāpṭa viraha - visa vivarna neṭra - sanṭāpṭaye'bhuṭ//"

- (Govinda Lilamrta

Meaning - "Śri Rādhā 's body resembles a golden urn filled with the cool milk of the pastimes of the darling of Her heart (Kṛṣṇa). Thus She brings joy to the fine - browed sakhi manjaris. But now She becomes the cause of their grief by becoming pale and sorrowful stung by the poison of separation."

Here the subject is $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$ who is grief stricken due to separation from Krsna, the object of love are the manjaris, the paleness of $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$ due to separation and sorrowful looks are excitant causes. Sighs etc. are the activities. Tears and paleness are silent activities, depression and humility are the passing moods. These moods together nourish the bhavollasā raţi of the devotee who possesses greater affection for $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$, resulting in the Rasa of separation.

Devotees practising in the mood of manjaris should equalize their moods with that of the sakhi – manjaris. Meaning, in one moment the devotee thinks in the mood of a manjari that he is present in the place of the pastimes in the spiritual form which is worthy of serving Rāḍhā– Kṛṣṇa and again he thinks that he is a devotee reading or hearing the pastime of separation. Thereafter relish occurs when he equalizes his feelings with those associates having similar moods. This means that the devotee feels the same pain of separation as Rūpa Manjari did.

(2) Example of Rasa of Union - (intimate Union) -

"iţyukţvasmiţā candrikārciţa – mukhiralirvilaṃghya vrajanya niḍadhavurasyurumadātpanim yadā mādhavah / kāṇḍarpah sa hi kam na darpamaṭanoḍapāḍaśirṣam saraiscakre jarjarmeva – tatṭanuyugaṃ .. romoḍgaṃ vyaja " - (Srikṛṣṇa Bhāvanāmṛṭa 9.25)

Meaning – "Hearing these humorous and witty words of Māḍhava, the Sakhūs were thrilled and filled with great bliss, their blooming lips resplendent with the moon of soft smiles. The King of Wit immediately crossed over to them and as soon as he placed his hand with fierce pride on the bosom of Rāḍhārani, Cupid covered the forms of the young lovers totally with arrows in the form of goose – flesh".

Here the subject is $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}$ -Krsna. The objects of love are the manjaris, the humor while collecting flowers, and Krsna touching $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}r\bar{a}ni$ are the excitant causes; soft smiles, fluttering glances are the gestures; goose – flesh, shivering and perspiration are silent activities; joy and pride are passing moods. These moods together nourish the bhavollasa rati of the devotee who possesses greater affection for $R\bar{a}dh\bar{a}rani$, resulting in the Rasa of union.

The practising devotee should once consider himself to be a sakhī manjarī, an associate of the pastime and next think of himself to be a reader of nectarine pastimes of Kṛṣṇa. The resultant of this equanimity is a oneness with the manjarī having similar feelings and hence he is able to relish the Rasa of union. In this way the devotee practise in the mood of manjarī is able to relish the four types of Rasa in separation such as purvarāga and four types of Rasa in union such as short, narrow etc.

"tadanubhavamayan Rasasaran svānubhāvamayena rasenaikaṭaya vibhāvya pivaṭa" –(Prītisanḍarbha)

RASADARSAN

Meaning - "The devotee yearning for the mood of manijari should assume oneness with the relish of the eternally established manijaris (e.g. Rupa Manijari). Then their feelings will flow through the devotee thus enabling him to gain access to the Rasa".

In his purport to Alankara Kaustubha, Viśvañatha Ćakravarti has written -

"Aṭha Rasa sākṣaṭkāre paripaṭi yaṭhā – āḍau śravaṇakirṭanāḍi bhajanānām paunah puṇyāṭ anānḍarupayā raṭerābirbhāvalı taḍānanṭaram vibhāvāḍi samavāḍhan ḍāśayam raṭeh sākṣāṭkārah / ṭaḍaṭaram punasṭaireva vibhāvāḍi kāraṇai Rasasvarūpa bhavaṭi / ṭaḍuṭṭaram punasṭaireva vibhāvāḍi kāraṇai Rasasvarūpa bhavaṭi / ṭaduṭṭaram punasṭaireva vibhāvāḍi kāraṇai Rasasākṣātkārah".

Meaning - "The method of gaining access to Rasa is - first, the appearance of extremely joyful passion due to repeatedly hearing the Divine literature that is filled with the moods akin to our own desire, and glorifying whatever we hear. This is followed by more splendid experience due to absorption in such thoughts. After this the passion transforms into Rasa. Then we again experience the moods of vibhāva, anubhāvu, passing moods and silent activities, ultimately gaining access to Rasa or experiencing 'Rasadarśan'."
